300 DIE AS FIRE, RIOT RAGE IN PRISON MURDER SUSPECT'S WATCH IS FOUND

SALESMEN GET LIBERTY; BEADS BEING CHECKED

Two Men Held in Baker Case Are Cleared as Alibis Stand Up.

TIMEPIECE LOCATED BY POST REPORTER

Workman Tells of Buying It From Stranger Hard Pressed for Cash.

NECKLACE'S OWNER DENIES SALE OR GIFT

Woman Claims Trinket But Can Not Account for Its Being at Death Scene.

A man's watch and a string of coral beads now in the possession of police are the two clews which police believe will lead them from a bewildering maze of false leads to the arrest of the slayer of Mary Baker.

The coral beads were found with the garments of Mary Baker. A Post reporter recovered the watch from a workman who purchased it from a stranger near the Highway Bridge at 8:45 o'clock on the night that the girl was murdered.

John Kane, mate on a dredge which is operated in the vicinity of the Highway Bridge, told a Post reporter yesterday that he had bought the watch from the stranger and Charles Quertermous, of Alexandria, Va., had financed the transaction.

Seller Claimed Need of Fuel.

On Friday night, April 11, this stranger approached the crew of pipefitters working under Quartermous near the Highway Bridge and told him that he was without funds and his automobile had become stranded for lack of gasoline. Quartermous bought the watch, which he turned over to Kane.

Quertermous had identified Mervin Sisson, salesman, of Warsaw, Va., as the man who had sold the watch, but the other men, with whom the stranger had spoken in the absence of Quertermous, who had gone home for some money, declared that Quertermous' identification was erroneous.

Sisson and Julian Gallagher, also a salesman, who lives in the same town as Sisson, were released yesterday at 5:10 o'clock after their alibis proved impregnable and their palm prints failed to correspond with those found on the murder car.

Owner of Beads Found.

Operatives traced the string of beads which was found in a sewer on the experimental farm of the Department of Agriculture to a woman who recognized the trinket as her property. Yet she yielded the startling information that she did not know Miss Baker. This woman has the earrings and the ring which are part of the same jewelry set as the beads.

Armed with these valuable clues, authorities are confident that the slayer of the Navy Department clerk will soon be in custody. Kane, who had the watch, gave it to a Post reporter yesterday who transferred it to officials in charge of the investigation.

There is every hope that the owner of the timepiece will be located. With his isolation, police say, they may connect the presence of the beads and the sale of the watch to the killer of Mary Baker.

The watch is a Waltham make and is probably 15 years old. It is gold filled. A local jeweler, who inspected the watch, said it is the "open-face huntiny" type case. On the back is a decorative shield without a monogram.

Repaid numbers scratched on the inside of a cover which shields the mechanism have been traced to a District jeweler. Attached to the watch is a gold-filled locket, on which are no marks. The face of the locket is studded with nineteen stones, two of which are missing.

A solid gold hammered chain attached the locket to the watch. The jeweler who is believed to have repaired the watch made no memorandum of the work which indicated that a minor job, such as the placement of a crystal, had been done.

Numbers to Be Checked.

Investigators, pursuing the possibility that the watch may have been questioned the men yesterday and the property of either of the suspects, discovered that each has a timepiece.

NEW CLEWS IN MURDER

CITY'S HEADS FAVOR LOAN BILL, IS BELIEF

Commissioners Expected to Indorse Capper Measure at Hearing Today.

BOARD STAND OUTLINED

Indorsement in principle of the Capper bill providing for a Federal loan of $15,000,000 to the municipal government to provide for needed public improvements is expected to be given by the District Commissioners at the public hearings on the bill in the Senate District committee room this afternoon.

The new board of District Commissioners has agreed, it is understood, that the proposal of Senator Capper should be accepted with alacrity by the people of the District, despite the fact that it is exactly contrary to the "pay as you go" law laid down for the District by Representative Simmons (Republican), of Nebraska, chairman of the House District appropriations subcommittee. Mr. Simmons proclaimed his dictum at the meeting of the Federation of Citizens Associations last Saturday night at which the Commissioners were present. A short time after Mr. Simmons declared his opposition to the Capper bill the Federation formally voted its belief that the Federal Government should lend the District $25,000,000, instead of $15,000,000.

NATIONAL ORIGINS REPEAL IS VOTED

Norbeck's Amendment to Harris Measure Wins in Senate Vote.

RECOMMITTING REFUSED

(Associated Press.)

Repeal of the newly established national origins basis for restrictive immigration was voted yesterday by the Senate on a surprise move by Senator Norbeck (Republican), South Dakota.

The vote was 34 to 39 for the repeal. However, the Norbeck proposal also provided for further restriction, which would cut down the annual immigration from 150,000 to 120,000.

The South Dakotan offered his proposition as a namendment to the bill by Senator Harris (Democrat), Georgia, to provide for quota restrictions on immigrants from the Central and South American countries.

Senator Harris is one of the strong advocates of the national origins basis of immigration, and when he lost the fight to keep the repeal amendment out of his measure the Georgian voted for a motion by Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, to recommit the whole bill to committee. That motion lost by a vote of 38 to 34.

At adjournament the Harris measure was still pending. It must be acted upon by the Senate and House

Judge Paroles Embezzler 'Punished by His Own Acts'

New Jersey Man Betrayed Bank, Wife and Friends 15 Years Ago.

Newark, N. J. April 21 (N.Y.W.N.S.) Those who believe in the long arm of retribution which reaches out and at last finds and punishes offenders, together with those who aver that sin is its own punishment, may be disposed to agree with Judge Guy L. Fake in the Federal court here today when he gave a suspended sentence to Abram Cornelius and paroled him in the custody of members of his family.

Cornelius is the man who, fifteen years ago, absconded with $11,000 of the funds of the Citizens' National Bank of Englewood, N. J., of which he was cashier, and fled, taking with him a stenographer with whom he was infatuated.

And looking down today at the withered old man, once the Beau Brummel of Englewood, as he stood before him, shattered, shamed and outcast, the judge realized the hell

PARKER CHOICE SEEMS HEADED FOR REJECTION

Vote in Senate Certain to Be Adverse, Is Prediction.

UNFAVORABLE VOTE CAST IN COMMITTEE

Judiciary Group Decides Not to Ask Judge to Appear.

LINEUP OF BALLOTS CALLED SIGNIFICANT

Progressives, Regulars and Democrats Combine on Unfavorable Report.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Unless some unforeseen development occurs the nomination of Judge John J. Parker for the Supreme Court will be disposed of by the Senate this week and the action of the judiciary committee yesterday strengthened the opinion that he will not be confirmed.

The committee voted 10 to 6 against confirmation and 10 to 4 against calling the judge before the committee. It is understood that some of his friends now intend to advise him to ask the committee to let him appear, but it is doubtful if such a request and the granting of it would appreciably alter the situation.

Some influences, not associated with the White House, have been trying to get the judge to withdraw his name, but he has shown no disposition to do so. Whether yesterday's committee action will influence him to do so remains to be seen.

Strength of Opposition.

The strength of the opposition in the committee was rather a surprise, but it is believed to reflect the ratio by which the three Senate groups, regulars, Progressives and Democrats, will vote against him when and if the question comes to a Senate vote.

For example, in the committee, all the Progressives, Senators Borah, Blaine and Norris, and three out of seven regulars, Robinson, of Indiana; Steiwer and Deneen, voted against confirmation, as did four out of six Democrats, Senators Caraway, Ashurst, Dill and Walsh, of Montana.

The regulars voting for were Senators Hastings, Hebert, Gillette and Waterman, and the Democrats were Senators Overman and Stephens. Overman is from Parker's State and has been advocating his nomination.

Significance of Ballot.

The fact that Senators Robinson, Deneen and Steiwer voted against confirmation is significant. No one of them is up for reelection. Senator Deneen, in fact, has already been eliminated in the primary. In Senator Steiwer's State, Senator McNary is up for reelection. It indicates that these gentlemen have accepted the argument that Judge Parker's confirmation will do the Republican party no good. Especially is this true of Senators Robinson and Deneen in whose States there are large colored voting populations. In Oregon it is the labor oppostition that is making itself felt.

There were 25 votes mustered against Chief Justice Hughes and the regulars were solidly behind him and the Democrats about evenly split. A switch of ten votes or so would have defeated him. With the regulars now split on Judge Parker and he having nothing like the strength among the Democrats that Hughes did and with the Progressives solidly against him it is difficult to see just how he is to be confirmed.

It was apparently the way in which Judge Parker worded his recent statement about appearing before the committee that caused the committee to vote against calling him. The judge had said he would be glad to appear before the committee if "requested" to do so.

Judge's Chances Debated.

Those who are against him on the committee do not want to be placed in the light of calling him. As a matter of fact they think it will hurt the judge for him to appear because their cross-examination would not be a kid-gloved affair.

There seemed to be a misunderstanding, too, about whether the President and the Department of Justice wanted Judge Parker to appear. The information of Senators Borah and Norris had been that they did want him to, but they were represented in the committee yesterday

INCENDIARISM SEEN IN HOLOCAUST THAT TRAPS FELONS IN CELL BLOCKS DISORDER COMES IN WAKE OF FLAME WITH 1,500 SOLDIERS CALLED OUT Front view of the Ohio State Penitentiary at Columbus, Ohio.

Cotton and Woolen Mills at Ohio Penitentiary Also Blaze; Inmates Slug Firemen as They Attempt to Extinguish Conflagration.

ARMY INFANTRY ORDERED INSID TO KEEP ORDER GUNS AND GAS

Women Nurses Attending Injured are Sent Out After Rioting Begins; Convicts Aid Each Other to Escape From Trap; Smoke Responsible for Many of Deaths in Crowded Cell Houses.

Columbus, Ohio, April 21 (A.P.).—More than 300 men confined in Ohio penitentiary here met death tonight when a disastrous fire swept four cell blocks in the prison yards. Most of the dead were convicts who were trapped in the ill-fated tiers of cells. More than 100 others were affected seriously by smoke, and it was feared more would die.

Regular Army troops, national guardsmen, prison guards and Columbus police were on duty in the prison late tonight attempting to maintain order among more than 1,000 convicts who were loose in the prison yards and who it was believed had set several fires in the prison cotton mills, had cut fire hose and had threatened firemen.

The penitentiary yards resembled an armed camp after a pitched battle. Lying on the grass were the bodies of some 200 victims of the blaze, most of them killed by dense smoke. In the prison hospital basement lay almost 00 other dead. A few dead were known to be in G and H cell blocks where the fire burned furiously for several hours after it started in an adjoining block and spread rapidly under a stiff west wind.

Troops Have Trouble Controlling Felons.

The loose convicts were being driven into the dining halls. Troops were having trouble controlling the men who, earlier in the excitement, had pitched in and aided in rescue work.

The first intimation that the first fire was of incendiary origin came from State Fire Marshal Ray Gill. He said he believed the fire was set in several places simultaneously in the I and K cell blocks. The later fire in the cotton mills were incendiary, he said.

Chief of Police Harry E. French of Columbus, helping to command the situation in the prison enclosure, ordered all women nurses from the penitentiary at 9:45 p. m. He said he issued the order to insure safety for the women. The convicts in the yards, prodded by soldiers and guards, were thinning out and it was believed all men would be in their cells within an hour.

All Fires Believed Incendiary.

Later in the night some of the convicts cornered in dining halls again got loose in the yards and at 10:15 p. m. it was estimated that about 2,000 of the more than 4,000 men in the prison were still milling about in the enclosure.

Fire department officials believed all the fires were incendiary. The first fire, on the I and K cell block roofs, was near the spot where men had been working during the day with an oil preparation to repair the roof. This, it was believed, was used to start the blaze. Other places, fired with oil soaked cloth, included the Catholic Chapel, cotton mill and woolen mill.

The fire was started in a manner much the same as the Junction City prison brick plant blaze, when some twenty convicts were burned to death.

Convicts slugged three firemen and injured another, while the men were attempting to get a line of hose on the flames. All four injured firemen needed the attention af a doctor.

Infantry Company Goes In.

Just as two Associated Press reporters completed their count of 305 dead, fire broke out in the cotton mills, and it was reported then that convicts had fired the mills. A company of United States Infantry and prison guards were ordered by Warden Preston Thomas to clear the penitentiary yards. There was said to have been grumbling among the loose convicts and trouble was feared at that time.

Col. Baird, of Fort Hays, and a company of regular Army infantry went into the prison at 8:45 p. m.

Rescuers continued to rush in oxygen tanks and other medical supplies.

A call was sent out for Company 37, Ohio National Guard, an auto truck unit. The machines were to be used to carry the dead to the coliseum in the State fair grounds.

Tear Gas Bombs Held Ready.

The fire in the woolen mills was quenched, but a few minutes later broke out again. Prison officials feared the convicts were restarting the fire. Prisoners were said to have threatened Columbus city firemen who were fighting the blaze in the mills. Guards were trying to drive the loose convicts into the dining halls, but with little success. Because of the unrest in the prison, it was said no effort would be made to move the bodies until morning.

National Guardsmen took in a truck load of tear gas bombs for use in an emergency. They also took in gas masks for the guards and soldiers if it was found necessary to use the bombs.

Warden Thomas, at 9 p. m., asked for two more companies of soldiers, including one regular Army unit from Fort Hays and one National Guard Company. These were quickly supplied by authorities.

Medical detachments of the National Guard were ordered in from Delaware, Ohio, and a regular company there, under Capt. Harry Whitaker, was ordered to stand ready for duty.

Convicts Cut Hose.

Firemen working on the mill fire, which was finally extinguished, reported to the warden that some convicts ha dcut their hose and had tried to fire their gasoline wager. The warden told the fire chief to go into the prison yard and to appeal to the better element among the prisoners to maintain order.

In all, 1,500 Ohio National Guardsmen are on duty in the prison or on the way. About one-third of the loose convicts were locked up in their cells by 9:0 p. m.

Telegraph blanks were issued to convicts. They were told to address them to relatives and were assured they would be sent, so the relatives would know they had escaped death in the conflagration.

Maj. Gen. Benson W. Hough, Ohio National Guard, was in charge of the troops in the prison. The troops were driving the loose convicts into the dining halls. There was some disorder in the dining rooms, but the guards quelled it before any one was hurt. The convicts broke up some furniture before they were brought under control.

CONVICTS GALLANT IN OHIO HOLOCAUST

'BAD MEN' CREATE STIR

Columbus, Ohio., April 21 (A.P.).—Death spread by the fire through the tinderlike blocks of Ohio Penitentiary here tonight reigned supreme in the prison yard where the bodies of at least 200 men lay stiff and silent, victims of one of the worst disasters in the history of the State.

A sudden burst of flame, followed by a dense cloud of smoke, marked the beginning of the catastrophe. The flames first appeared in a cell block where a new structure within the prison walls was being erected. Quickly the fire spread toward tiers of cells occupied by convicts.

The wind conspired with the flames to spread death and soon many prisoners trapped in their cells were beyond human aid. As prisoners and guards fought heroically to rescue the trapped men, guardamen, regular Army soldiers and reserve guards, the scene within the prison walls was one of utter disorder. Convicts still in their cells, feared the fire would reach them and they sent up a mighty crescendo of screams.

Within a few minutes, scores of convicts not locked in, were staggering onto the damp grass in the prison yards from the smoke-filled cell tiers. They would walk a step, totter then drop in their tracks. Others, overcome within the blocks, were carried out by convicts and laid on the grass, where artificial respiration methods were tried by prisoners. When it became evident that a man was beyond human help, he was quickly covered with a blanket and the rescuer passed along to another victim.

Soon police reserves and firemen

FINANCE RESTRAINT IS URGED BY HOOVER

Letters to Congress Chairmen Warn Against Excessive Appropriations.

NEITHER MADE PUBLIC

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover has sent letters to the chairmen of the Senate finance and the House appropriations committees which are understood to warn against the formulation of excessive appropriation measures during the demainder of this session of Congress.

Although neither Chairman Jones of the Senate finance committee nor Chairman Wood of the House appropriations committee would make the letters public last night, both said they had received communications relative to appropriation matters.

Senator Jones said he probably would make the letter public today, because he felt the information should be given to the people.

Ritter today set Friday for hearing of injunction proceedings prohibiting molesting Al "Scarface" Capone, Chicago gang leader, without proper warrants, and from escorting him to the State boundary line as ordered by Gov. Carlton. Capone arrived at his home here yesterday for a stay of two weeks.

The temporary injunction was granted March 22. Today's action was taken in United States district court here.

Delegates Will Sign London Treaty Today

With Final Difficulties Removed, Secretary Stimson Will Be First to Affix Signature to Pact With Solid Gold Pen.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.

London, April 21 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—About noon tomorrow (6 a. m., E. S. T.), in Queen Anne's drawing room, St. James Palace, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson will pick up a solid gold pen, dip it in one of Queen Anne's inkwells, the latter lent by his majestry's privy council, and inscribe his name on the Treaty of London. The other American delegates will follow, then the French, British, Italian and Japanese, and the naval conference, formally opened amid great pomp by King George three months ago today in the House of Lords, will be ended.

Final difficulties were cleared up today at a meeting of the heads of the delegations. Only minor alterations were made in the treaty itself, but the majority of the delegations felt disappointed at the final failure, which had to be recorded, to pass on to the League of Nations, with something approaching a recommendation, the agreed compromies between the global tonnage method of limitation and limitation by categories.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald returned from Scotland this morning and called a meeting of the British Empire delegation, at which both Australia and New Zealand objected to MacDonald's draft of a covering letter to the secretary general of the League of Nations.

Physicians Are Handicapped.

A number of physicians arrived, but were handicapped by lack of space.

Several men were reported to be trapped in one portion of the burning building, but smoke was so dense they could not be reached. Firemen on the inside of the wall were attempting to get to them.

Some of the dead, all prisoners, were burned to death while others died from the effects of a dense smoke that engulfed the prison yard. Those burned to death were trapped in the dormitory on the west end of the prison.

Five hundred others were liberated from the dormitory and ran into the prison yard. It was feared that additional deaths would result from smoke.

Reporter Counts 90 Bodies.

An Associated Press staff man inside the walls early counted 90 bodies completely covered with blankets as though dead. The floor of the hospital basement was covered with men, many of them dead or dying, and at least 50 were on the floor of the main hospital, some of them apparently lifeless. Physicians in white were working with water soaked handkerchiefs over their noses so dense was the smoke.

Miss Amanda Thomas, daughter of Warden P. E. Thomas, when asked for an estimate of the number of dead, replied, "We have no idea."

Lights were turned on, making it easier to aid the stricken prisoners. Twenty or more doctors were treating the men who were placed on the grass in the prison court.

Prisoners in the cell blocks east of the warden's residence were screaming and demanding to be freed. The chief deputy warden and several guards went into the block with heavy axes and hammers apparently prepared to break the locks if necessary.

Firefighters admitted to the inside through the west gate seemed to be making little headway against the rapidly spreading flames.

Prisoners Call for Help.

The prisoners in the yard were calling on each other for help to bring men out of the fifth and sixth ranges and the H cell block, where it was estimated 68 men were trapped. Prisoners, firemen and guards were making their way into this section with axes, picks, wire cutters and all available tools.

State Finance Director Harry Silver, Adjt. Gen. A. W. Reynolds, Charles Jones, secretary to the governor, and Col. Robert Haubrick, of the National Guard, went into the prison at 7 o'clock.

Col. Haubrick assumed charge of the National Guard.

The prison yard took on the appearance of a battlefield as the flames leaped, apparently uncontrolled, through the heavy smoke.

State Militia Arrives.

The State militia arrived on the scene as the excitement grew. The prisoners were moving supplies from the commissary, which was among the threatened buildings.

All of the city's fire equipment was rushed to the prison to aid guards in fighting the blaze. Prisoners also were aiding to bring it under control.

Guards and policemen, some armed with submachine guns, surrounded the prison to prevent any possible escape. There was no indication of trouble, however.

Warden P. E. Thomas ordered 700 convicts moved from cell blocks Nos. 2 and 8 toward which the fire was sweeping.

A huge crowd gathered outside the prison walls.

General Alarm Turned In.

A general alarm was turned in half hour after the fire started. The dense smoke made it impossible to determine the full extent of the fire.

Warden Thomas left his home as the flames, fanned by a stiff west wind, moved toward E and F blocks west of the warden's quarters.

Firemen were attempting to place lines on the roofs of the blocks in an effort to check the blaze.

Artificial respiration was resorted to in an attempt to save the lives of the men overcome by smoke.

G. U. GOLFING STAR IS SUED FOR $30,000

Two Other Students Say He Is Responsible for Their Alleged Crash Hurts.

COLLISION IS DESCRIBED

Maurice J. McCarthy, internationally known golfing star of Georgetown University, was named defendant in two suits for an aggregate of $30,000 damages filed yesterday in District Supreme Court as the aftermath of an automobile accident last February 20.

Joseph M. Murphy and John L. Cranley, also students of the university, are the plaintiffs in the actions, the former seeking $20,000 damages and the latter $10,000.

Both Murphy and Cranley alleged they were hurled from McCarthy's automobile when the vehicle collided with another automobile which was parked on the side of the Washington-Baltimore highway near Laurel, Md. Each claims to have been permanently injured.

The golfing star, who has gained much of his links fame through ability to keep his eye on the ball, is accused in the two petitions of not keeping a proper lookout for other automobiles and with traveling at an excessive speed. This alleged negligence caused the accident and their subsequent injuries, the two plaintiffs assert.

Attorneys Wilton J. Lambert, R. H. Yeatman and Austin Canfield appear for the plaintiffs.

McCarthy is a senior at Georgetown. He was named an alternate on this year's Walker Cup Team, which shortly will invade England. Desire to finish his education is said to be the reason he will not accompany the golfing stars, who will be led by Bobby Jones as captain.

DELEGATES TO SIGN LONDON PACT TODAY

forwarding the compromise on behalf of the conference.

At one time there had been a resolution drafted which gave the blessing of the conference to the agreement on method, as Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, of France, desired. The Italians objected to this and pointed out they had consistently refused to agree, so MacDonald tried his hand at a covering letter, which his own dominions would not allow today as too closely in agreement with the French views.

MacDonald, at the meeting of the heads of the delegations today accordingly had to suggest drastic modification of his own suggested draft, the Italians finding it unnecessary to say anything more, the Americans and Japanese sitting silent, and the French expressing regret which might have been more eloquently put if Briand had arrived from Paris in time to see his pet scheme, which he has frequently termed the chief achievement of the conference, squashed.

The heads of the delegations then appointed a committee which tonight finished the work of drafting a short covering letter transmitting to Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general of the league, the reports of committee No. 1 on the compromise on method. But the last paragraph of the original draft, expressing hope that the league would accept this in its own work, was cut out.

Americans to Sail After Dinner.

The Italians insisted that not merely their own objections, but those of all other powers at various stages of work on the compromise should also be sent to Geneva, which is being done. Geneva accordingly receives not an agreement, but a record of partial agreement and ultimate disagreement so far as the five powers are concerned.

The heads of the delegations did little to the text of the treaty itself today, except to make another modification in the preamble tending to make it more innocuous, and various minor corrections. The treaty, amounting to about 16,000 words in both English and French was then hurried off to the government printers who are working all tonight to have copies ready tomorrow.

The American delegation will sail for home in the Leviathan, as arranged, leaving London after dinner, the giant liner being held long enough to permit them to board her.

French to Start Building.

It was learned in French quarters after Briand's return tonight that the first French battle cruiser will be laid down almost at once. The Italian experts came to London last January proclaiming that Italy did not want any capital ships, but now they show what almost amounts to eagerness to build battle cruisers. It seems a safe assumption that Italian battle cruisers will immediately follow the French ones and that a race to see which can get them finished first is likely.

Voting of a preliminary credit in the German Reichstag for a second German "pocket battleship" of the Ersatz Preussen type makes it probable that three instead of two French battle cruisers will be built, and this means three Italian battle cruisers. These six new capital ships will be within treaty limits, for they will displace about 23,000 tons each and both France and Italy are allowed to build 70,000 tons of capital ships each, while the other powers observe a battleship holiday.

The diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Telegraph publishes today the text of the escalator clause, Article XXI of the treaty negotiated here. It differs slightly from the text of the clause made public in Tokyo April 19, provision for diplomatic exchanges in the event of any signatory of the three-power section of the treaty exceeding treaty building figures being added. The text as published here follows:

Text of Escalator Clause.

"If, during the term of the present treaty, the requirements of national security of any high contracting party in respect of vessels of war limited by Part III of the present treaty are, in the opinion of that party, materially affected by new construction of any power other than those who joined in Part III of this treaty, that high contracting party will notify other parties to Part III as to the increase required to be made in its own tonnages with one or more of the categories of such vessels of war, specifying particularly the proposed increase and the reasons therefore, and shall be entitled to make such increase.

"Thereupon other parties to Part III of this treaty shall be entitled to make a proportionate increase in the categories specified and the said other parties shall promptly advise with each other through diplomatic channels as to the situation thus presented."

PATROL REQUESTED FOR MURDER SCENE

Ft. Myer Vicinity Should Be Protected, Conference of Federations Says.

MOORE BILL APPROVED

Appropriate legislation to provide for police patrolling of War Department roads in the vicinity of Fort Myer, where Mary Baker's body was found, was urged last night in a resolution adopted last night by the Interfederation Conference, representing the Arlington and Montgomery civic federations and the District Citizens Association.

The resolution indorsed the Moore bill now pending in Congress and included a clause that would demand the patrolling of any other unpatrolled Federal roads in the metropolitan area.

The conference also went on record, after a prolonged discussion as favoring the appointment of a commission by Congress to determine the fiscal relationship between the Federal Government and the District and the Federal Government and adjacent areas regarding projects incidental to development of the National Capital.

A dicussion as to whether the resolution should approve the pending Moore bill on this subject ended in an amendment by which the executive committee was authorized to confer with Representative Moore on his proposal.

A resolution indorsing amendments of Senator Tydings to the District appropriations bill for grading and paving roadways in Rock Creek Park to the Maryland line and for the paving of New Hampshire avenue from Buchanan street to the Maryland line, together with the construction of a viaduct or underpass at the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad crossing, was also adopted.

Several other matters were discussed at length without action being taken.

CONVICTS HEROIC AS PRISON BURNS

were on the scene, and within a short time, fire lines were established and water was being played upon the giant flames as they swept heavenward from the west gate of west cell tiers. Then soldiers came to augment the guards both within the prison and on the outside.

Doctors by the score followed, and they were rushed into the prison yard, to work on the stricken. Most of these men were clad in their white hospital clothes, and as they made their way through the long lines of unconscious and dead, working heroically to revive some of the victims, the onlookers were reminded of scenes on a battlefield.

Six Hundred Loose in Yard.

At least 600 convicts were loose in the smoke-filled prison yard. And be it said to their credit—they created no disorder, but labored hard to aid in the rescue work and succor their stricken fellow prisoners who were trapped in the ill-fated cell blocks.

The hospital produced many tragic scenes. Fifty unconscious men were dragged in, and the doctors and attendants gave what aid they could. As a man died convicts removed his body to the basement, and within a very short time the hospital floor was covered with victims.

At the outset of the disaster, and before the grave seriousness of the fire was discovered, it was feared that a general delivery of prisoners had been attempted. Guards rushed here and there, picking up machine guns and shotguns, shouting for ammunition, and adding to the general disorder.

Outside, grim-faced guards trained their guns on the walls, inside, a score of guards kept an eye on the loose convicts, fearing there would be a break. But when it was learned that men were trapped in the blazing cell blocks, guards and convicts forgot their positions and joined hands in the common effort to save the men who were trapped. The screams of the dying and those who had been seared by the flames, were heart-rending.

Convicts Wield Axes.

For once in the history of the penitentiary, convicts handled ropes, axes, hammers and other rescue equipment, which, in other days would have been kept from them. There ran a Negro convict, with a piece of white cloth over his nose. He carried a rope and a hook, and he made valiant efforts to throw the hook into a barred window. Finally he succeeded, and soon he was shinning up the rope in an effort to gain entrance to the burning section. Here another convict carried a sledge hammer and made an assault on a locked door.

Only in the east cell blocks, where are confined 1,000 men, including Company K, the "bad men" of the prison, did the convicts cause any disorder. Here they shouted and screamed and hammered on their cell doors. Some one reported that the key to this block had been lost. When the chief warden could not find the key he took in sledge hammers to loose the men if the flames threatened the block.

Movie Camera Stolen.

A moving picture camera was reported stolen from a parked car at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue yesterday afternoon by William C. Conz, of Springfield, Mass. Police were told the value of the camera was $185.

HOOVER VETOES COIN MEASURE AS UNWISE

First Message of Refusal Given to Congress on Hudspeth Bill.

PRACTICE HELD RISKY

(By Associated Press.)

President Hoover made known yesterday his desire to stop the practice of authorizing the issuance of special coins to commemorate historical events.

In his first veto message to the House, the Chief Executive described the practice as "unstable and unwise" and returned the Hudspeth bill to authorize issuance of 10,000 50-cent silver pieces commemorative of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Gadsden purchase.

Asserting that the matter of issuing the coins for the Gadsden purchase celebration itself was of no large importance, President Hoover wrote that similar proposals before Congress in the aggregate jeopardized the principles of sound coinage.

"The monetary system of the country is created and exists for certain well-defined and essential purposes," the message read. "Sound practice demands that it should not be diverted to other uses." He added that "experience has demonstrated that the necessities and convenience of the people can best be served and the integrity of our coins can only be protected from counterfeiting by limiting the number of designs with which in the course of time the public can become thoroughly familiar."

Commemorative coins, he said, introduced an element of confusions and lack of uniformity, increased the danger of counterfeit coins being successfully passed and stimulated counterfeiting because of the premiums at which they are sold.

"The Government" he concluded, "would be glad to assist such celebrations in the creation of appropriate medals which do not have coinage functions."

The Gadsden purchase coinage measure was introduced by Representative Hudspetch, Democrat, who is ill at his home in El Paso, Tex., where the celebration of the purchase of the territory that borders Mexico in Arizona, New Mexico and the westernmost corner of Texas is to be held July 5.

Representative Simms (Republican), New Mexico, who sponsored the measure for his colleague, said the President might hav overlooked the purposes of the celebration, which, he said, is to encourage better relationships between people in the border States and Mexico.

REPEAL OF NATIONAL ORIGINS ACT IS VOTED

and signed by the President before the provision for repeal of the national origins basis could become effective.

Foes of the national origins provision contended it trimmed the allotments on immigration allowed to Germany and the Scandinavian countries and allowed increased immigration from England and southern European countries.

President Hoover in his message to Congress at the opening of the special session, asked it not to permit the national origins provision to go into effect, but the Senate refused to act on that request and the method became operative last July 1. In the House, which in the last Congress had agreed to repeal national origins, the request of the President was held in abeyance to await action by the Senate, and the proposal has not been brought before that branch in this Congress.

There were a series of roll calls yesterday on immigration proposals. Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, sought to put up the bars against all immigration for three years beginning next January 1, but he lost by a vote of 37 to 29.

Senator Harris sought to pare down even further the immigration allotments provided by the Norbeck amendment. An attempt to restrict the total to 40,000 annually was defeated, 38 to 34. Another attempt by Harris to cut down the total to 81,000 lost by a single vote, 34 to 33.

Janitor Wins Acquittal On Possession Charge

Charles Riley, colored, who for more than twenty years has been doing janitor work in buildings housing attorneys in the courthouse vicinity, was acquitted by a jury in Police Court yesterday on a charge of possessing liquor. Two attorneys testified as to the man's good character, while Attorney John P. Mullen defended him.

Riley was arrested December 23 last, by a police raiding squad at his home on Second street southeast near L street. He was tried once before but a mistrial resulted.

CITY HEADS BELIEVED TO FAVOR LOAN BILL

dent of the Board of Commissioners, will present the views of the municipal government on the Capper plan and is expected to oppose the proviso that the District shall be required to pay 3½ per cent interest on the loan. The bill provides that the loan is to be repaid at the rate of $1,000,000 a year.

Despite the seeming effort on the part of many persons in recent years to show a cleavage of interest between the Federal and District governments in the development of Washington, the new board of District Commissioners is convinced that there can be no successful division of interest. Washington, the members hold, is and always will be the National Capital, and therefore the subject of more than local interest among its residents. On the other hand, the welfare of Washington residents is of primary importance to the entire Nation, inasmuch as the majority of Washington residents are public servants engaged in work deemed by Congress essential to the national betterment and welfare.

The Commissioners yesterday refused to discuss the Capper bill of what they will say before the committee this afternoon, saying that the matter was one which involved the Budget Bureau, and they wished to proceed cautiously until they had learned thoroughly the various deviations of the red-tape with which the administration of District affairs is surrounded.

None the less the fact that the Commissioners are expected to give formal indorsement to the Capper plan to advance a Federal loan for improvements in the National Capital is looked on as meaning that the Budget Bureau has also given its approval to the plan, inasmuch as the Commissioners, as a matter of course from past practice, referred the Capper bill to the Budget Bureau for comment. The practice is to submit to Congress the opinion of the Budget Bureau at the same time the Commissioners transmit their own views.

Because of the cloak of secrecy which the Budget Bureau so jealously insists shall cloak its dealings with District affairs it is not known whether the Budget Bureau agrees with the Commissioners that the loan should be made without any interest charge whatever.

FOSTER AND FOUR GIVEN RIOT TERMS

Leaders of 'Red Thursday' Demonstration Speak Minds in Court.

PENALTIES ARE ELASTIC

New York, April 21 (A.P.).—The five Communist leaders who conducted the "Red Thursday" unemployment riot in Union Square last month received prison sentences today when they came before the court of three general sessions judges who convicted them of unlawful assembly in a verdict handed up April 11.

William Z. Foster, Communist leader in America, and three of his chief lieutenants, received indeterminate terms under the law from one day to three years, and the fifth, described by the court as an "instrument in the hands of the others," was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Robert H. Elder, attorney for the five men, said that they would take an immediate appeal. The Communists were returned to the Tombs, where they have been held since their conviction.

Hurl Charges at Court.

All five demanded to be heard before sentence was passed upon them, and hurled charges of injustice at the court until the judges declared they had been insulted and made them stop.

Besides Foster, Robert Minor, editor of a radical paper; Israel Amter, district organizer, and Harry Raymond, an aid, received indeterminate sentences. The State parole board considers these cases, usually after the prisoners have served six months in jail. Joseph Lester received the 30-day sentence.

The general sessions court was guarded by a heavy police detail today, but there was no demonstration on the part of Communist sympathisers.

Demand to Be Heard.

Suspending court routine the men immediately were taken before the bar where Foster and Minor demanded to be heard.

Foster leaped to his feet after being forced into a chair by court attendants and the judges listened patiently while he protested against the procedure in his arrest, trial and conviction. His attorney finally made him be seated.

"The breaking up of the parade, holding us without bail, trumping up of these charges, the denial of our right to a jury trial, carrying us before judges with minds made up, is an excellent example of capitalistic justice, used for the suppression of the workers' rights," Foster said.

Editor Makes Speech.

Minor, editor of a radical newspaper, also demanded the right to speak in his behalf before the sentences were meted out.

"This is obviously a final effort to prevent the workers from the right of citizenry to use the public streets and squares as constitutionally permitted," he said.

Amter also was allowed to speak, but was ruled down when he started attacking the court. Raymond also received permission to talk, declaring "this is typical of the biased capitalistic justice and it is in line with the justice so generously and malignantly meted to our Massachusetts comrades."

The courtroom and halls were cleared before the prisoners were taken away to the Tombs. In indeterminate sentences the State Parole Board seldom considers a case until the prisoner has served at least six months.

EMBEZZLER GIVEN SUSPENDED TERM

sufficiently punished by his own acts. I do not believe any good purpose would be served by sending him to jail." And he paroled Cornelius in the custody of his son-in-law, Arthur B. Reeve, a real estate man of Englewood, N. J.

Certainly it would appear that Nemesis boarded the train with Cornelius and Miss Loretta Adelgais, his former stenographer, on the night of July 28, 1918, when he left his wife and children, his trust to the bank, and all his friends for an illicit life and love.

From the day of his disappearance fate remained with Abram Cornelius. Nothing prospered that was touched by his hand.

The couple went to Cheyenne, Wyo., where, under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Cornell, they started life together.

Hotel Enterprise Failed.

Cornelius took several thousand dollars of his stolen money and opened a mountain cottage resort, a sort of small hotel. It failed. He engaged in several other business ventures. None succeeded. His wife, back in Englewood, died of a broken heart.

His own health forced him to give up work. The money being all spent, Miss Adelgais found work as a stenographer and attempted to support the family.

Three children born to the couple were finally sent to be cared for by the authorities.

Miss Adelgais gradually developed signs of insanity and recently she was sent to the State insane asylum near Cheyenne. This was shortly after the belated marriage of the couple in January of this year.

Forced to Go to Poorhouse.

Old and broken, Cornelius was forced to go to the poorhouse. And there he was found a few weeks ago, through a photograph taken in yachting costume on a distant day when he owned a boat on the Hudson River. It was a photograph which the persistence of the Federal authorities had caused to get into the hands of the Cheyenne police.

Cornelius went back to Englewood today, after fifteen years, in the automobile of his son-in-law and accompanied by his two daughters who say they will stand behind him.

But his punishment is not over. He has still to face the familiar scenes of a happier day, the sad faces of old friends, remorse and the sharp stings of the pointed finger, the sly looks and whisperings of Englewood.

Thief Steals Typewriter.

Francis J. Work, living at Potomac Apartments, Twenty-first and C streets northwest, reported to police of the Third Precinct yesterday that someone had entered the Tally-Ho Tavern, near Seventeenth and I streets northwest, and taken a portable typewriter which he had just purchased.

SHERIFF SHOT DEAD; FEELING RUNS HIGH

Florida Man Taken to Jail in Another County After Slaying in Street.

MURDER CHARGE FILED

Blountstown, Fla., April 1 (A.P.).—Charged with shooting to death Sheriff C. D. Clark on the street here today, J. T. Blackwell, former operator of a fishing camp stand, was removed to jail tonight in another county, the name of which was not revealed.

Feeling over the shooting was given by officers as the reason for Blackwell's removal, which came after a coroner's jury had ordered him held for first-degree murder. The grand jury will investigate the case early next week.

Deputy Sheriff McClelland said that Blackwell started firing a pistol as the sheriff passed him. About five or six shots were fired, he said, three taking effect.

McClelland said that ill feeling had existed between the men for some time. No one could explain the exact cause of today's difficulty.

Both McClelland and Brown said they understood Blackwell had been an employe of the Federal Government, but representatives of the Department of Justice and the prohibition unit said they had no record of his employment in their services. The dry agents said, however, they understood Blackwell had been a prosecution witness in a liquor case.

Clark was 54 years old and had been sheriff for 14 years. He is survived by a wife and several children. Blackwell also is married.

Officer Rescues Two From Creek

Naval Man at Annapolis Saves Man and Woman as Canoe Capsizes.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 21.—Bravery of Lieut. Del W. Hyatt, United States Navy, saved a man and woman from probable drowning in the waters of Spa Creek last night after their canoe capsized. The man saved is Damon Decker, but the identity of the woman was not revealed.

Lieut. Hyatt heard cries for help. Investigating, he observed in the darkness the overturned canoe about 100 yards from shore and what appeared to be two forms clinging to it. Discarding heavy clothing he plunged into the chilled waters and swam to the craft. He found the woman sprawled across the canoe and Dayton holding on, and at the same time supporting his companion. The woman was in a semiconscious state.

With the assistance of Dayton, the officer swam along and piloted the craft into shallow water. Meanwhile, others in the neighborhood, who had gathered along the shore, gave aid and the man and woman were conveyed to their homes in an automobile.

Flier Planning Paris Hop Calls on Hoover

George Hutchinson, Richmond, Va., and Baltimore, Md., aviator, who is planning to make a New York-to-Paris flight in June, yesterday called on President Hoover. Some 20 of Hutchinson's backers accompanied him.

Hutchinson said that the Lions Club, of Richmond, is sponsoring the transatlantic flight and will furnish the funds. A Lockheed-Sirius ship, identical with the one in which Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh Sunday established a new West-East transcontinental record, will be purchased, he stated.

WARRANT RULED OUT OF RUM DEATH TRIAL

Judge Holds Writ Held by Two Slain Agents May Not Be Introduced.

MURDER CHARGE FACED

West Palm Beach, Fla., April 21 (A.P.).—Judge A. G. Hartridge today ruled that the search warrant held by Federal prohibition agents who were killed during a raid on the home of George W. Moore, alleged bootlegger here, is not admissible as evidence in Moore's trial for murder.

Judge Hartridge, after hearing argument, recalled the jury and informed it that "daytime" is between the rising and setting of the sun, that prosecution counsel had admitted the agents attempted service on a daytime warrant after the setting of the sun, and that he was granting a defense motion to exclude the search warrant.

Court was recessed for the day immediately afterward.

Moore pleaded not guilty on a second degree murder charge and was placed on trial for the slayings.

Moore is charged with killing the agents, Robert K. Moncure and Franklin R. Patterson, with a shotgun when they went to his home in search of liquor. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of first degree murder, but the county grand jury, which subsequently indicted Moore, held that the slayings were not premeditated and reduced the charge to second degree murder.

After Moore pleaded not guilty, defense counsel filed a motion to quash the indictments, but Judge Hartridge overruled it.

A panel of approximately 100 veniremen was summoned and selection of a jury was begun.

When You Whip Cream

Every woman who has ever made a whipped cream dessert knows that there are times when the cream simply will not stiffen, no matter how strenuously it is whipped. The trouble may be that the cream is too thin or too warm. Place it against the ice in your refrigerator and let it become thoroughly cold. Then add the beaten, well-chilled white of an egg and you can whip it easily.

Keep your refrigerator two-thirds full of pure, sparkling American Ice and you will always be ready for cooking emergencies. American Ice service is as dependable as the superior quality of the Ice itself.

FATHER GIVEN LIFE FOR DROWNING SON

North Dakota Farmer Admits He Threw Deformed Boy Into River.

SEARCHERS HUNT BODY

Mandan, N. Dak., April 21 (A.P.). Admitting that he had thrown his 4-year-old son into the river and then watched the boy's struggles until he had vanished under the water, Gus Reinhold, 40, a farmer living near Stanton, today was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor.

Reinhold, the father of six other children, the eldest 13, pleaded guilty to a first-degree murder charge filed by State's Attorney John Moses, of Mercer County. Moses said the farmer had confessed to drowning the child two weeks ago in the Knife River near Beulah.

No motive was given for the crime in the confession, Moses said, but when Reinhold came before Judge H. L. Berry he declared that he had been drinking and that the liquor had "got the best" of him. Moses said he had information tending to show that Mr. and Mrs. Reinhold had discussed sending the boy away.

After Reinhold had entered his plea of guilty, he insisted that sentence be deferred until the body of the boy had been recovered from the river. Searching parties have been raking the brush-covered banks of the river since Sunday in unsuccessful efforts to find the body.

First information which led to discovery of the crime came from Fred Winmil, a tax assessor. Winmil knew there were seven children in the family, and when Mrs. Reinhold told him she had only five sons and a daughter he became suspicious and reported the matter to the sheriff.

Authorities learned that other children had told neighbors that their little brother was missing. Reinhold was brought in for questioning. At first the farmer told a story of having given the child to a miner at Beulah and said the man had departed with the baby for Minnesota. After hours of grilling he broke down and confessed to Sheriff H. G. Klindworth and State's Attorney Moses.

Reinhold said the drowning occurred April 8. He told how he had tossed the child into the stream. Twice the boy came to the surface, struggling and crying, he said, as he watched from a seat in his automobile. Then he turned and drove home.

Huge Crowd Visits Firemen Festival

Over 7,000 Attracted by Melville-Reiss Shows in Alexandria.

A crowd of merrymakers estimated in excess of 7,000 thronged the old Cardinals' baseball park at the head of King street in Alexandria last night as the Melville-Reiss Shows officially opened the Alexandria Fire Department's spring festival which will continue all this week.

The Melville-Reiss midway offers a large and variegated aggregation of attractions, including 15 different shows and 10 thrilling rides, all of the former and most of the latter being new and radically different from midway offerings seen here in the past.

The festival was opened officially at 7 o'clock by James Duncan, chief of the Alexandria Fire Department, to music by the two Melville-Reiss bands playing at opposite ends of the 1,500-foot midway.

In all, there are 15 different shows on the midway, as well as 10 rides. Among the latter are such ever-popular favorites as the merry-go-round, ferris wheel and caterpillar, as well as a number now being presented for the first time, such as "Leaping Lena," the "Lindy Loop" and others.

WATCH OF MURDER SUSPECT FOUND AS BEADS ARE CHECKED

The police intend to check the case and works numbers through the manufacturer and in this way they hope to find its owner.

Freedom was given Sisson and Gallagher on the order of Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth, after their handprints were taken and found dissimilar to those found on the murder car. Fingerprints on the steering wheel are also unlike theirs.

Inspector Shelby has announced that the handprints and fingerprints of Fred Wilson, architect in the Treasury Department, will be made and checked with those on Miss Baker's automobile. Wilson was questioned the day after the finding of Miss Baker's bullet-riddled body in a culvert near the Arlington National Cemetery. He appeared voluntarily at headquarters last Sunday and was again requestioned. He has announced that he is willing to assist the police in every possible manner in tracking the perpetrator of the crime.

Alibis Check in Detail.

Mr. Gloth announced the release of the two suspects after operatives in the Northern Neck of Virginia reported that their alibi checked in the minutest detail.

Sisson was greeted at the door of the jail by W. C. Albert, a superior in the Baltimore firm by which Sisson is employed. James R. Duncan, counsel for Sisson, who had been ready to institute a court fight for his release, also met the exonerated man.

Taylor said that Sisson had been in the employ of his concern for seven years, and is "one of the most faithful and industrious salesmen on the force. I am here to return him to his position." Sisson and Gallagher each thanked the press for its kindly treatment of them.

Police Hold Topcoat.

The topcoat which was part of the transaction between Quertermous and the stranger on the night of the murder is in the hands of police. Only one identification mark was found on it, the trademark of a Washington store which had apparently been sewn in the garment by an amateur. Police followed this lead and learned that the coat had been purchased at a second-hand clothing store in this city. The date and the name of the purchaser could not be obtained.

The finding of the watch provides a great starting point in the solving of the crime, according to police. They have no doubt of the fact that the man who sold the timeepiece and coat was highly excited and nervous and was anxious to leave the vircinity of the murder.

All the workmen in Quertermous' pipe-fitting crew are agreed on that point, although they disagreed on the identity of Sisson.

Walked Away From Auto.

It is also patent, according to police, that the man lied when he said his car had exhausted its fuel and it had been stranded on the Virginia side of the Highway Bridge. This stranger said he was en route from Florida to New Jersey. He approached the bridge from the direction where Miss Baker's car was found.

When Quertermous was on his way home to obtain money for the purchase he kept asking how long it would be before Quertermous returned. When the sale was effected, instead of going to the point where he said the automobile was stranded, he walked northward over the Highway Bridge.

Police are asking themselves: Why did the man refuse to give his name to Quertermous when the latter offered to forward the article to him?

Failed to Get Name and Address.

Why did he not obtain the name and address of Quertermous when the latter offered to take property as security for a small loan to purchase gasoline and redeem the security later? The watch is valued at more than the $10 which was paid for it.

If the stranger is the man who murdered Mary Baker he had ample time after driving from the Ellipse to bring her body over the Key Bridge, assault and shoot her, throw her body in the culvert, abandon the death car and walk from its place of abandonment to the south side of the Highway Bridge.

Quertermous said that he saw the man at 8:45 on the night of the murder. Other men said it might have been 8:10 o'clock or possibly a bit earlier.

Empty Car Seen at 8:10.

An employe of the Arlington National Cemetery said he saw Miss Baker's unoccupied car at 8:10 on the night of the murder at the same point where it was found the following morning.

Officials have discounted the idea that the man escaped through the Experimental Farm over the Rosslyn Bridge. To do this he would have had to pass the culvert where the woman he murdered was lying. This route is held by police as extremely improbable.

They do not believe that the killer threw the wearing apparel of Miss Baker and the trinkets into the manhole on the farm. They believe that this was done by friends of the colored men who rifled the murder car before its discovery. The articles were not in the manhole on the Tuesday before they were found.

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 31.—Curiosity cost Henry Ford, 86, South Mountain, Md., near here, his life today. Ford left his home when a produce truck skidded on the slippery national highway to see what damage had been done.

Fay, Baltimore, came along and skidded on the bananas. In trying to right it, Fay lost control and his car plunged into the telephone pole against which Ford was leaning, crushing him.

Jurors' Absence Delays Inquest

Anne Arundel Court Set to Face Busy Crime Docket Today.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 21.—With one juror absent, and another not summoned, because of an oversight of Sheriff Michael F. Carter's force, Judge Robert Moss was prevented from assembling the grand inquest when the Circuit Court from Anne Arundel County convened for the regular April term today.

Carroll C. Brice, dairyman, of the Third District, was the absentee and Richard T. Clark, Fourth District, farmer, was not notified. Brice, it was said, was under the impression that Easter Monday was a holiday. The judge sternly reminded the veniremen that this day is in no sense a holiday, though so observed by many persons, but added that he had not planned for the investigation group to get down to work until tomorrow.

Indications point to a busy court tomorrow with the regular docket already large, and arson, murder and other criminal actions booked for investigation, in addition to a large number of local liquor law violations, slated for trial.

TARIFF CONFEREES AGREE ON CHANGES

Large Block of Amendments Made on Administrative Provisions of Law.

REPORT DUE THIS WEEK

(Associated Press.)

The tariff bill conferees, working with dispatch but acting only upon secondary differences, yesterday adjusted a large block of amendments to the administrative provisions of existing law over which the Senate and House were in disagreement.

The Senate provision liberalizing present restrictions against importation of foreign literature regarded as seditious or obscene by placing in the Federal courts instead of customs officials the power to pass final judgment on entry was among the many changes approved.

The conferees, however, eliminated the Senate amendment to create a consumers' counsel in the Tariff Commission with power to participate in and initiate proceedings before that body for tariff rate changes

Debenture Passed Over.

The export debenture, legislative flexible tariff, Tariff Commission reorganization and prohibition against entry of goods made by forced or indentured labor were all passed over after brief discussion of each provision. The Senate conferees have promised not to recede on the debenture and executive flexible tariff repeal amendments without coming back to the Senate for instructions.

So much progress was made by the tariff adjusters in composing their less controversial differences that predictions were made that a report might be made to the two houses this week.

Other changes in the present law approved would:

Authorize the United States to enter into reciprocal agreements with foreign countries looking to free entry of advertising matter, except that printed abroad, advertising goods made in this country, sent through the mails to individual addresses.

Marking of Foreign Articles.

Exempt foreign articles from the "country of origin" marking requirement where injury or great expense making the importation prohibitive would result.

Direct the Tariff Commission to ascertain for the information of Congress the approximate average cost per barrel during the last three years of crude petroleum delivered to Atlantic seaboard refiners from American fields and the present cost of deliveries from Lake Maracaibo, Venezuela, to the same points.

Make conclusive the decision of the President in excluding articles from entry where unfair methods are disclosed.

Provide a fine of $1,000 or a year in prison for any one interfering with or influencing the members of the Tariff Commission.

Senate Provisions Eliminated.

Require owners of vessels or their masters to give bond that they would pay the compensation and expenses of customs workers required to work at night, Sunday or on a holiday, in connection with the entering or clearing of vessels.

The conferees eliminated the Senate provisions requiring the Federal Government to pay for expenses of inspecting shipments in railroad cars from Canada or Mexico if the examination disclosed no evidence of an intention to evade the customs laws.

New language inserted by the Senate to govern free entry of repair parts added to American vessels in foreign ports was approved. It would exempt such repairs from tax if evidence was shown that the vessel "while in the regular course of her voyage was compelled by stress of weather or other casualty to put into such foreign port and purchase said equipments, or make such repairs, to secure the safety and seaworthiness of the vessel to enable her to reach her port of destination."

BURNS PROVE FATAL TO CHEVY CHASE GIRL

Marian Moss, 8, Succumbs to Injuries She Got Playing With Matches.

SUFFERING, SHE SMILES

Marian Moss, 4 years old, of 8 East Lennox street, Chevy Chase, lost a valiant fight for life yesterday after violating one of the primary rules of childhood. She played with matches and was fatally burned, but she was game to the end.

After being prepared for bed Sunday night she obtained a box of matches by some means, and before she realized the danger the box and her flannel nightgown were ablaze. Her screams brought her mother, Mrs. McElroy Moss, and a friend who was in the house. They were able to stamp out the flames, but only after the little girl's arms, face and hips were seared.

Although she was suffering intense pain, Marian bit her lip and held back her tears after the first fear had passed. A physician was summoned, and he immediately ordered the girl taken to Children's Hospital. The seriousness of the burns was not realized at first.

"Mother, remember, I'm smiling," Marian said as she entered the automobile that took her to the hospital. And throughout the ride she maintained her stoic resolution not to cry.

Despite every effort to save the brave girl's life, she died about 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

Her father, who was in Norfolk, hurried home, but arrived only about an hour before Marian succumbed. The mother, who herself had only recently returned from a hospital, was prostrate last night.

Laborer's Death Seen as Murder

Autopsy Reveals Farmhand Had Internal Fracture of Skull.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 21.—Jefferson County authorities today were considering an apparent murder case as a result of findings by two physicians that Frank Taylor, 22, Negro farmhand, died of a concussion of the brain resulting from an internal skull fracture inflicted by some blunt instrument.

This development occurred over the week-end after a coroner's inquest Friday, unable to detect the fracture from the outside of the skull, held death due to causes unknown. The Negro's body was found in a pasture field at the Forest Boyer Home near Kabletown Friday by two boys. He had last been seen Wednesday evening. External bruises on the head and body were thought to have been due to blows from the hoofs of animals at pasture in the field.

Drs. J. J. Pittman and J. M. Miller performed the autopsy over the week-end and discovered the internal fracture, holding death due to a blow over the left temple from some blunt instrument. Authorities were without a clew today as to the perpetrator of the attack.

Auto Crash Cuts Off Town's Lights

Washington Man Is Fined $125 Following Accident Near Cumberland.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 21.—The town of Ellerslie, this county, was plunged into darkness and had its telephone service cut off shortly after midnight yesterday when the phaeton driven by David Coffman, an employe of a Washington, D. C., dyeing plant, crashed into a pole carrying the wires for the town's lighting system, tearing down both the lighting mains and telephone trunk lines.

Coffman, a former resident of Cumberland, was arrested by Officer E. D. Dryden, Maryland State Police, and lodged in jail in default of $1,000 bond. He was fined $125 and costs in people's court today.

Officer Dryden said the machine first struck the pole and then the culvert, throwing the occupants into a creek. A wheel from the machine was thrown 90 feet and through the side of a vacant house, Officer Dryden said.

Mr. Urner Norris, this city, an occupant of the machine, was taken to Allegany Hospital suffering from head injuries. He was discharged Sunday at 9 a. m. James Kelly, of this city, escaped injury.

President Hoover Thanks Associated Press for Aid

The following greeting from President Hoover was read at the luncheon by Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press:

"Frank B. Noyes,

"President, Associated Press,

"I would appreciate it greatly if you would extend my greetings to the annual meeting of the Associated Press. It is a great institution which daily renders intellectual service to the American people with that fine impartiality and reliability that have given it high distinction.

"It is a marvelous advancement of science that enables you to listen to an address from London by Secretary Stimson. The work of Secretary Stimson and his colleagues at the conference has been carefully and fully transmitted over the wires of the Associated Press day by day for the past four months and thereby the American people have gained an appreciation of the problems which the conference has undertaken to solve and the difficulties they have met and the success that has resulted.

"Their achievement marks another great step in the maintenance of peace. Only the utmost courage and tenacity of the eminent men comprising all the delegations at London could have brought to so difficult a problem a solution fruitful of so many blessings.

"The Associated Press and other press representatives have contributed materially, for such negotiation in these times is not alone the work of the delegation, it must be responsive to national instinct and national aspiration. Peace is fundamentally a state of mind and a resolve of will of the whole people. Therefore the fidelity of the press representatives in reporting the course of the conference has played a large part in its success by giving all of our people an instant and comprehensive knowledge of the facts, and thus enabling the Nation itself to share in these negotiations.

"I wish to compliment the Associated Press on the service it has rendered. "HERBERT HOOVER."

New York, April 21 (A.P.).—The text of Secretary Stimson's radio address to the annual luncheon of the Associated Press follows:

Mr. Noyes and Gentlemen of the Associated Press:

When I had the pleasure of meeting the directors of the Associated Press last January at the dinner given by Mr. Ochs I warned you that the London Conference would be a prosaic performance. I prophesied that what it lacked in drama it would make up in length. I think you will agree with me that my prophecy has been fulfilled.

Dramatic Promise for Future.

Yet because it has involved tedious and necessarily private negotiation, it would be a great error to jump to the conclusion that it does not contain dramatic promise for the future. As a matter of fact, the past fourteen weeks have given me more confidence in my belief that the peaceful methods of diplomacy can eventually take the place of war than anything I have witnessed since the last war drew to a close.

This confidence is based on the fact that limitation of arms gives us an affirmative plan for promoting good relations. Merely negative opposition to war is not sufficient. Progress in civilization comes only from the affirmative cultivation of habits of good will.

Nearly two years ago the nations of the world met together at Paris and signed a document containing a good resolution of epoch-making importance.

Kellogg Pact Is Lauded.

That was the so-called Kellogg-Briand pact in which the nations renounced war as an instrument of national policy and agreed in future to solve their controversies only by pacific means. That instrument proposed a new era. It laid down a new international policy and it had behind it a general and overwhelming popular support. But such a proposal can not be made and then left alone to hatch. New eras do not come out of old conditions merely by a new edict or a good resolution.

In order to reach a condition when no nation will resort to war as an instrument of national policy there must be established a larger measure of confidence than now exists in the ability of the different nations of the world to maintain their pacific intentions under all the temptations and circumstances which are sure to confront them.

History shows us only too clearly what will happen if we leave the old conditions unchanged. Affirmative constructive steps must be taken to carry out our good resolution and to begin the evolution in mutual confidence and good will upon which the success of our resolution depends. Otherwise the failure of our good resolutions may produce a condition worse than if they had never been made.

Conference Call Decided.

Last spring President Hoover wisely decided that one of the most important of such constructive steps was a move toward naval limitation.

He realized that if the nations mean the Kellogg pact literally they must not allow conditions to arise that will jeopardize their promise. The first method to that end is an agreement on limitation of armaments. That is a clear and positive test of a national intention to maintain pacific relations under all circumstances. Such an agreement by its very nature precludes the idea of war as an instrument of national policy. For no nation is likely to agree that its neighbors shall have a navy large enough for such a purpose.

One of the surest tests, therefore, of the effectiveness of the Kellogg-Briand pact is the progress which is being made in the limitation of armament. Limitation of armament is a barometer or guage of the development of confidence between nations which will enable them to deal with each other wholly upon an amicable basis. It is for this reason that my experience in the naval conference has given me so much encouragement. This encouragement is not based solely on an appraisal of just how much has been accomplished in the particular treaty which we are signing but also upon the demonstration which this treaty affords that the process of limitation can be carried further in the future.

Two Separate Problems.

The work of the London conference has really comprised two quite separate naval problems—the problem of the relations between the navies of the United States, Great Britain and Japan, on the one hand, and the problem of the relations between the navies of Great Britain, France and Italy, on the other.

These are quite distinct problems. The first of these has been solved. This is a great achievement in itself and fruitful of great benefit to the general conditions of the world for the future. But it is a far simpler problem than the other, because the naval relations of three countries, sepatrated by such great oceans and wide distances as separate Great Britain, the United States and Japan, are necessarily less complex than the naval relations of the great powers of Europe.

The latter are complicated by many conditions from which the former are entirely free. Furthermore, America's isolated and advantageous position and the national security which this position affords impose upon us the duty to lead in the limitation of armaments and to refrain from criticizing others less fortunately placed Second Problem Discussed.

In the second of these problems—the problem of the relations of the navies of Great Britain, France and Italy—valuable discussions have been had and the underlying questions upon which a final solution must rest have been explored and clarified In much of the discussion members of the American delegation have been privileged to sit as friendly observers, watching the development and clarification of these underlying questions. The discussion has not merely involved a negotiation about the size of navies or the types of ships. It has been a study and debate concerning the political questions which govern the relations of these three nations of Europe to each other.

Into these political questions it has not been America's business to enter. But sitting on the sidelines it has been quite evident that the result of the conference has been to clarify issues and make their solution in the future more possible. In this way a long step forward has been made toward ultimate limitation by those nations which have not yet agreed on a complete limitation of their navies.

This came not only by clarifying the results of their discussion but by the patience and good temper in which those discussions were carried on. This has been a good augury for the prospects of their final success. They are separating now full of determination to grapple with these problems as they now stand revealed and to finally solve them.

Summary of Message.

In summary the message which I should like to make clear to you all today is that the success of the London Navay Conference is necessarily related to the success of the Kellogg pact. The good resolutions of that pact can not stand alone. They must be followed by national effort, prompt, constant, unremitting effort to make them good, and no line of effort offers a better earnest of its success than the line of naval disarmament. In selecting that line President Hoover laid his finger upon the best method of insuring that our solemn promise of two years ago should be fulfilled.

There are but two possible roads to travel. One is the road of competitive armament and this, whether accompanied or unaccompanied by good intentions, will lead to war. The other is the way of limitation with its constant effort to forestall war by creating such confidence and friendliness between nations as will prevent the seeds of war from growing. We have now before us not only a definite objective but a concrete method of going at it. There is something to work on, to get our teeth into.

The hard work and constant vigilance which will translate good intentions into practical realities can be accomplished and are being accomplished by naval limitation. This, to me, is the significance and encouragement of the conference we have just been through.

Schoolboy to Get Medal for Valor

Tony Marino to Be Cited by A. A. A. for Saving Child From Auto.

Tony Marino, lieutenant in the American Automobile Association's schoolboy patrol at Peabody School, will be awarded the association's medal of valor at the end of school in June for risking his life April 10 at Fifth and C streets northeast to save Richard E. West, jr., 8 years old.

Marino leaped in front of a fast approaching automobile to save young West, according to a recommendation made to the District of Columbia division of the A. A. A. for an award by Miss M. G. Young, principal of the Peabody-Hilton-Carbery schools, and by Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. West, parents of the youth whose life was saved.

"According to eyewitnesses, no braver deed was done in France," declared Miss Young. "Too much commendation can not be given Tony, for he, beyond doubt, by quick, self-sacrificing action, saved Richard from serious injury, if not from death."

Armored Car Driver Draws Five to Ten Years in Sing Sing.

New York, April 21 (A.P.).—Raymond A. Gallagher, formerly of Fort Worth, Tex., a chauffeur of an armored automobile who disappeared last fall with $64,922 and was captured in Paterson, N. J., after a Nation-wide search, was sentenced today to five to ten years in Sing Sing Prison.

The armored car was found abandoned in Greenwich Village last October 17, with Gallagher and the money missing. After hiding out in the West, Gallagher was not found until he returned East to visit his mother.

The report said Gallagher gave information which led to the recovery of $19,332 found in the possession of his wife in Hot Springs, Ark., and that $5,301 was found in a suitcase which Gallagher left with a sister-in-law in Jersey City. The remainder of the money Gallagher spent while touring the Southwest with his wife.

know what VITA-MINUTES do

The world's hardest studying is done during the early-morning hours —and into the early hours are also put the hardest classes. Minds work better and faster during the Vita-Minutes.

Everybody knows that studying, memorizing, all forms of giving attention, are hard work. Everybody has had the experience of reading on and on—and suddenly realizing that he doesn't know what he's been reading about for the last ten minutes!

But in the early morning, during the Vita-Minutes hours, the attention isn't fatigued, overlaid with impressions, as it is later in the day. Concentration is far easier, during the Vita-Minutes—and attention gives itself freely and eagerly.

That's why schools—especially colleges—put into early morning hours the classes that require the closest attention, the hardest thinking. They take advantage of the Vita-Minutes.

That's why newspapers are better-read, read with more interest and attention, in the morning. That's why morning messages register better in people's minds—in buyers minds. That's why ads read during the Vita-Minutes, read by minds that are fresh and rested, with the day's planning ahead of them, are more apt to turn into same-day sales . . . And The Post is the outstanding Washington newspaper which gives to its advertisers that big advantage.

Circulation? reader-interest? reader-confidence? The Post has all those things in full measure. It's an extra advantage of The Post that it's a Vita-Minutes newspaper.

AFRAID TO CALL JUDGE PARKER.

The adverse report of the Senate judiciary committee on the confirmation of Judge John J. Parker as an associate justice of the Supreme Court is not surprising. The judiciary committee is stocked with insurgents who are seeking to vitiate the authority of the court. It is dominated by the coalition that is also trying to discredit the administration. Its membership can in no way be considered a cross-section of the Senate.

Foremost among the opponents of Judge Parker are Senator Norris, an Al Smith Republican, who is chairman of the committee, and Senators Borah and Blaine, noted for their attacks upon the Supreme Court and upon the administration. They were joined by Senators Robinson, of Indiana, and Steiwer, of Oregon, and four Democrats who have been prominent in the insurgent-Democratic coalition.

Should Judge Parker go down to defeat it will be because of an unfortunate combination of this element with politicians who fear that if they stand by their convictions they will incur the displeasure of organizations opposed to Judge Parker. His qualifications, character, ability and integrity have been left out of the question.

The committee decided not to hear Judge Parker in refutation of the charges that have been made against him. His opponents want to hear but one side of the case. It appears that the committee was afraid that Judge Parker's appearance would have turned the controversy to a question of merit and qualifications, which would have been answered in his favor. He is condemned by the committee without a hearing.

It is merely a bogey that has been raised against President Hoover's choice for the supreme bench. To reject Judge Parker's nomination because of political hysteria would be one of the most shameful things the Senate of the United States could do. Senators who show their cowardice by sacrificing a competent jurist in an attempt to save their own necks will be in no position to demand the confidence of their constituents when seeking reelection.

THE CRUX OF FARM RELIEF.

The row which the Minneapolis Grain Exchange seeks to precipitate between the United States Chamber of Commerce and the Federal Farm Board can have little or no effect upon the farm relief policy as embodied in the farm marketing act and the program as brought into being by the board, the Farmers' National Grain Corporation and miscellaneous agencies. The exchange has addressed grain, produce and commodity exchanges throughout the country, requesting them to use their influence to bring an expression of condemnation of the several farm relief agencies from the Chamber of Commerce, which meets in convention the latter part of the month. A preliminary draft of a resolution demanding repeal of the marketing act and condemning the board for competing with private business has been prepared. The farm relief policy, says the exchange, foreshadows the ultimate and complete destruction of all business. "If grain and produce dealers of this country can be destroyed by Federal statute, no line of business is safe."

Grain and produce dealers doubtless have been hard hit by the functioning of the stabilization and marketing corporations. But the law as enacted did not contemplate the protection of the grain and produce dealers. The time to oppose the farm relief project was prior to the enactment of the legislation. Now that the law has been written on the statute books, friends of the farmer will be able to keep it there.

The Farm Board may be considered a fixture. The present policy will be carried through to success or failure. Time alone will reveal the result, but it may be said that success depends entirely upon general cooperation in the acreage curtailment program. Drought, said Chairman Legge recently, will never be so extensive as to eliminate the necessity for acreage reduction. A stabilizing agency to take care of normal fluctuation is entirely practicable, he added, but stabilization is impossible where continuous surpluses are produced.

The board insists that the curtailment program is meeting with support. Everywhere in the Northwest the program is being accepted. The test, however, will come when, after general curtailment has been agreed to, it is seen whether or not individual farmers are willing to carry out their agreement. There will be strong temptation to expand one's individual acreage when one's neighbor's acreage has been limited. Already there are a few rumblings of discontent with the curtailment project.

Gov. Clyde M. Reed, of Kansas, for example, publicly expresses himself as lacking in sympathy with the program of restricting production to domestic requirements. While the Farm Board does not intend to limit production to this extent, a paragraph in Gov. Reed's statement is worthy of note. He says:

> If the farmer is to be told that he can not expect his substantial and permanent prosperity unless he limits his production to domestic requirements, why not apply the same rule to the industrial section of the United States? Why select the farmer as the one class that may not under any circumstance have the benefit of the price level produced by the tariff and the so-called American standard of living?

The tariff can only keep out foreign production; it has no effect on the world price level. Industry is so organized that it can adjust production to suit the demand. The farmers must be similarly organized.

The Minneapolis Grain Exchange seeks to destroy the farm relief project by repealing the law and condemning the various agencies. The undertaking is futile. If the farm relief project is destroyed, it will be through the refusal of farmers to cooperate in acreage curtailment. If they persist in producing uncontrollable surpluses they need not expect to be saved.

THE LINDBERGH FLIGHT.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh's new record for speed in crossing the continent is not the most important feature of their flight. The famous pair set out to explore the higher altitudes of travel, and their success may lead to a new movement to establish express air lines up where the atmosphere is thin. The new speed record is significant chiefly because it was made by traveling at a higher altitude.

The Lindberghs made their trip in three hours and fifteen minutes less than the record trip of Capt. Frank Hawks. They maintained an altitude above 10,000 feet for most of the distance, and at times climbed to higher than 15,000. By taking advantage of the thin air they were able to make an average speed of 172 miles.

Much of the power of the airplane flying at low altitudes is consumed in overcoming air resistance. To double the speed of an airplane at the same altitude it is necessary to increase its motive power eight times. The only possible way of escaping this air resistance is to rise above it. If a plane were able to travel ten miles above the earth it would encounter air only one-tenth as dense as that at sea level. Power required to propel an airplane at a rate of 100 or 125 miles per hour at the usual level of flying would produce many times that speed in the upper strata of air.

Another factor in favor of express routes at high altitudes is that of safety. Danger of collisions with mountains and other obstructions is lessened. Planes with stalled engines or out of fuel have a better chance to glide to a safe landing, and safe descent by parachutes when necessary would be more certain.

One reason why the airplane is not being more extensively used today is that it does not accomplish all that was hoped for in the way of speed. Air mail frequently is no faster than railway mail. The speed of a fast train is only about doubled by that of an airplane and that gain is often lost in transferring passengers and cargo from airports to destination. The development of greater speed and safety would greatly enhance the usefulness and popularity of aircraft.

THE OREGON TRAIL.

A prairie schooner drawn by mule teams is retracing that famous trail to the Pacific Coast over which traveled a hundred years ago this summer the first overland emigrants to Oregon. The caravan will follow as nearly as possible the Oregon Trail, keeping to the scheduled followed in 1830 by the dauntless little company headed by Jedediah Smith, Dave Jackson and W. L. Sublette. Everywhere it will be greeted by flourishing villages and cities that grew in the wake of this first far-western migration.

The event strikes a responsive chord in the heart of every Westerner, for in that trek a century ago the development of the West began. But in a larger sense it is an occasion for national celebration, because it was over this trail that American influence was carried to the Pacific and united this expansive territory under one Government. By this route the Oregon colonizers reached the Columbia River Valley in the middle forties, the Mormon pioneers settled Utah in 1847, and the gold rush to California in 1849 was made possible.

The Oregon Trail led out into territory that did not definitely belong to the United States. This country laid claim to the Oregon country through the discovery of the Columbia River by Capt. Robert Gray in 1792 and that memorable expedition across the continent by Lewis and Clark in 1804, but the claim was disputed by Great Britain. It was the colonization that followed opening of the Oregon Trail that clinched the case in favor of the United States. California and the territory between the Sierras and the Rockies was then under the Mexican flag. American colonization was a vital factor in bringing this vast and wealthy region within the Union.

No more fascinating story has been written into history than the conquest of the West by way of the Oregon Trail. The advent of the prairie schooner was a logical sequel to the voyage of the Mayflower and the pioneering of Daniel Boone. The West does well to celebrate an event so rich in its significance to the American people.

COLOMBIA'S NEW REGIME.

A statement issued by Dr. Enrique Olaya Herrera, President-elect of Colombia, when he landed in New York this week outlined the policy he will pursue as chief executive of the neighboring republic. "My ideas on public administration," he says, "differ fundamentally from those which have generally prevailed in the government of my country. The principles of my administration shall be to conduct the government for the benefit of the nation with the most capable and best prepared men available."

That Colombia has not prospered as have other South American republics is not due to poverty of natural resources. A mountainous country, Colombia is underlaid with vast stores of mineral wealth. Her forests are extensive and valuable. Her farms produce a variety of crops including coffee, cotton, bananas, cocoa, vegetables, tobacco and wheat. Her oil wells spew forth 20,000,000 barrels annually. Her emerald mines are the most valuable in the world. Colombia has natural resources sufficient to support a population of 50,000,000, but her present population is less than 8,000,000.

Dr. Olaya, in his New York statement, promises early action on the legislation designed to clarify the oil question so that the industry may be reestablished at an early date. A financial committee composed of American experts will be selected to advise the government in its financial and economic problems, and an agricultural committee will be created to foster production and increase the country's purchasing power. A program of railway and highway construction under the direction of capable engineers appointed without regard to their political affiliations will be started at an early date. To carry forward these projects, Dr. Herrera plans to negotiate a substantial loan in the United States.

America has the greatest interest in the prosperity and development of this neighboring state. Washington has come to know Dr. Herrera well during his ministry, and recognizes in him a statesman of great ability, well fitted to carry forward a comprehensive program for the development and betterment of his country. The United States will cooperate in full measure in the upbuilding of Colombia.

DUTIES AND TYPES OF CRUISERS

By Commander HOLLOWAY H. FROST, U. S. N.

Cruisers have three primary duties: First, to gain information and deny it to the enemy. Second, to fight in the fleet action. Third, to attack and defend oversea trade.

These duties of naval forces have been recognized from the beginning of history. Nearly five centuries before Christ Themistocles sent three galleys northward along the coast of Thessaly to report the approach of Xerxes' fleet. The Persian admiral sent ten vessels ahead to prevent the Greek scouting cruisers from gaining information. The destruction of the Greek vessels proved at that early date the advantage of cruiser supremacy.

It was only after sail had been well developed as a method of propulsion that warships were divided into two distinct types. To fight in the fleet action ships of the line were developed. These were very large, had thick sides, mounted from 120 to 64 heavy guns and had moderate speed and maneuverability. To obtain information and attack trade cruisers came into being. They were smaller, handier and faster than ships of the line, but had thinner sides and fewer guns. These vessels were called frigates, corvettes, sloops, schooners and cutters. They carried from 44 to 12 light guns.

It will be seen that, even in these early days, there were many varieties of cruisers. The admirals made two demands: First, there must be cruisers in unlimited numbers. Second, all of them must be able to beat the enemy's cruisers. But then, as now, the naval minister found himself limited by finances. So he had to choose between building a large number of small weakly armed vessels or a few large heavily armed ships. He usually compromised by building about eight types, from the 44-gun frigate down to the 12-gun cutter.

For many years our Navy was composed entirely of cruisers. Joshua Humphreys designed the three splendid vessels of the Constitution class to be larger, more heavily armed, better protected and faster than any frigates afloat. They won three brilliant victories in six months. But our frigates were too few to create any appreciable pressure upon English oversea trade. Our numerous, but much smaller, privateers were more effective in such attacks. So our Navy built two squadrons of small fast vessels of the privateer type. It was about to send them to sea under Perry and Porter when peace was signed.

The advent of steam, the increased range of the gun, the invention of armor, the development of the torpedo and the introduction of radio have greatly modified naval warfare. Steam gave the cruiser a constantly increasing margin of speed over the battleship, but by introducing the repair and refueling problems limited the distances they could operate from bases. Armor increased the fighting strength of battleships as compared to that of cruisers. But the torpedo made the cruiser for the first time an important factor in the fleet action—as an indispensable support for the torpedo-carrying destroyers. The increased gun ranges and use of smoke screens made it necessary for cruisers to continue their mission of obtaining information of the enemy even during the battle—and radio permitted them to transmit this information quickly to the commander.

At the time of the Spanish-American War cruisers were divided into two general types: armored and protected.

The introduction of the larger and faster battle cruiser sounded the death knell of the armored cruiser. The protected cruiser had grown too large and was too slow. It was replaced by the light cruiser: 4,000 tons, 28 knots, 4-inch guns. Such were the famous German raiders Emden and Karlsruhe. The British boosted the tonnage to 5,500 and adopted the 6-inch gun as standard. The game little Emden did not have a chance against the Sidney's 6-inch guns. The Germans had to go to the 6-inch gun themselves—but they were a lap behind.

When the German auxiliary cruisers Moewe and Wolf worked such havoc along British trade routes, the admiralty designed the five vessels of the Hawkins class to run them down. To have great steaming endurance and carry 7.5-inch guns, the displacement was increased to 9,800 tons. Due to the existence of these vessels the Washington conference limited cruisers to 10,000 tons and 8-inch guns. The British and Japanese commenced building ships of this type and they were quickly followed by United States, France, Italy and even Spain. Germany was permitted to build six vessels of 10,000 tons without limitation as to size of guns. So they adopted a battery of six 11-inch. To meet this type France and Italy have considered building ships of 17,500 out of their battleship tonnage allotment, each carrying eight 12-inch guns. But, should the French and Italians build 12-inch cruisers, they in turn would be inferior to the British battle cruisers with 15-inch guns. This doubtless has given rise to the rumor that the French will build two 35,000-ton battle cruisers with 16-inch guns.

Another interesting development is the French Verdun class. While these vessels are camouflaged as destroyers they are in reality small light cruisers: 2,436 tons, five 5.5-inch guns and 40 knots.

Never in history had so much ingenuity been shown by designers of cruisers in attempts to outguess each other. We will build many cruisers in the next six years. Their design is probably the most vital question in our naval policy today.

JUST FOLKS

A SICK MAN PLEADS WITH HIS WIFE.

When I am sick, sit by my bed
And hold my hand and stroke my head,
And bring me dainties now and then
Until I say I'm well again.

Don't leave the room and me alone,
Let others use the telephone.
Let others when the doorbell rings
Take in what mail the postman brings.

And if, by chance, should company call
Don't stay out talking in the hall.
If you've a secret you would tell
Please let it wait 'till I get well.

Oh, wife, remain with me I beg
And serve my drink of milk and egg,
And if I groan, please do not scold
Or say: "You're not a 7-year-old!"

Or when I've called the doctor in
Don't stand beside my bed and grin.
When I my symptoms dire relate
Don't say: "It's something that he ate."

Beside my bed draw up your chair
And sigh to show me that you care.
Have pity for my sorry plight.
Don't try to tell me I'm all right!

The Vine Does the Clinging, But Chance Provides the Tree or Dead Stump to Which It Clings

By ROBERT QUILLEN

OPINIONS make the man, not man the opinions.

The things you believe—the convictions you so ardently defend—the "sacred principles" for which you may be ready to die—were absorbed from your environment, without conscious effort.

To say that you are a free man is a pleasant fiction, for you are controlled and directed by your convictions, and your convictions were chosen for you by chance or parental design.

Rare men form convictions contrary to the teachings they received in childhood and the standards they absorbed from youthful environment, but the ordinary man remains as he was shaped by early impressions.

When he boasts of his convictions or feels superior because of his standards, he is not praising himself but his teachers.

A kindly Nature, knowing his need of self-respect, induces him to think his opinions superior and himself superior because of them, but he is no more responsible for them than the clay in the potter's hands is responsible for the shape it assumes.

If he is reared in a Catholic home he becomes a Catholic; if his parents are Baptists he becomes a Baptist.

In Pennsylvania he becomes a Republican; in Georgia a Democrat.

If he was born in Germany, he saw the Fatherland righteously using every device to save itself from envious enemies; if he was born of old American stock, he saw militarists drunk with the lust of power assaulting a peaceful world.

In either case his convictions were ludicrous and deserving of pity, for he did not think his own thoughts but repeated parrotwise the opinions that chance had forced on him.

This inability to rise above environment and fashion opinions of pure reason explains the city agnostic and the rural believer.

Find a wit who scoffs at religion and you have a man born and bred within sight of skyscrapers.

He is surrounded and shut in by the great works of man and man alone seems great.

His disbelief in God is a product of his limitations and his narrow horizon, and he is no more responsible for it than the canary is responsible for its inability to survive in the open.

The countryman turns naturally to religion, as primitive man did, because he lives close to the great works of God.

In the sprouting of seed, the warm rains that feed the thirsty soil, the ripening grain, the birds, trees and everlasing hills he sees the will and glory of God and lifts up his eyes in reverence as inevitably as the grass grows sunward.

THE OVERCROWDED PRISON.

"Attorney General Mitchell says that the Federal prisons are so full of prohibition law violators that prosecutions may have to be slowed up for lack of a place to put the prisoners."—News Item.

Prosecutor (after a conviction)—Well, this is a pretty note!

Bootlegger—What's wrong?

Prosecutor (reading a note he has just received)—This is really most embarrassing. I had no idea of any such unfortunate development. I trust you'll excuse it.

Bootlegger (very puzzled)—Just what is it, sir?

Prosecutor—Are you sure you want to know. . . . I mean, do you think you can stand the shock of a most unexpected nature?

Bootlegger—Sure.

Prosecutor—Now promise me you won't get excited and make a scene?

Bootlegger—I give you my word.

Prosecutor—Well, we can't put you in prison!

Bootlegger (a little amazed)—Whaddaya mean you can't put me in prison? Wasn't I just convicted?

Prosecutor—Yes, but we can't lock you up at this time. I'm dreadfully sorry, old chap, and . . .

Bootlegger (now beginning to feel that he has been trifled with)—Never mind that I'm sorry stuff. . . . Lemme get this thing straight. . . . Do you mean to say you're refusing to lock me up?

Prosecutor (humbly)—It's not my fault. I did the best I could.

Bootlegger (quite indignant at the waste of time)—You can't pull that stuff on me. I know my rights. Why can't you lock me up?

Prosecutor—I've just got word that all the prisons are full.

Bootlegger—That's not my fault. I came here to be tried in good faith and at your request. I wasted a lot of time. Knowing from the start that I didn't have any defense, I realized a conviction was certain and I had got all prepared to go to prison. You told the judge I belonged in prison. He agreed with you. I fixed up all my affairs at the office and at home. My partners expect me to go to prison. My wife and family are prepared for it.

Prosecutor—Come, come, now; don't take it so hard. If the judge and I could get you into prison we'd gladly do so.

Bootlegger—You've got to get me in prison. If you don't my family will be awfully disappointed.

Prosecutor—You can tell them that just as soon as we get a room we'll send for you. I'll even put you at the top of the waiting list.

Bootlegger (sobbing)—I've got just as much right in a Federal prison as anybody else.

Prosecutor—Listen, my good man . . . you go home and explain things to the family as best you can, and I'll give you my word that as soon as there's a vacant cell you shall have it.

Bootlegger—But this sort of thing ought not to happen.

Prosecutor—I know it. I promise you that if you're ever arrested again it won't.

Bootlegger—But how're you going to stop it?

Prosecutor—Before we ever arrest you again I'll wire ahead for a reservation.

General Electric and Westinghouse are to take over the Radio Corporation. Possibly General Electric's purpose is to get its General Electric Hour free of charge.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Washington and Lincoln Would Have Favored Memorial to Thomas Jefferson in the Federal City.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to indorse the contention of your correspondent "Democrat" that Thomas Jefferson should have a major memorial in the Capital City to match those which help to keep fresh the memory of Washington and Lincoln from generation to generation. He rightly refers to Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln as the universally revered political trinity of America.

Could Washington and Lincoln come back no protest would be more emphatic than theirs regarding our country's neglect to provide a fitting memorial of the author of the Declaration of Independence.

Washington made clear his estimate of Jefferson, not only as a personal friend but as a patriot and a master politician, when he gave him a place in the Cabinet as our first Secretary of State.

Lincoln's appreciation of Jefferson was notably sympathetic. In a letter written in 1859 he said:

"All honor to Jefferson—to the man who, in the concrete pressure of a struggle for national independence by a single people, had the coolness, forecast, and sagacity to introduce into a merely revolutionary document an abstract truth, applicable to all men and all times, and so embalm it there that today and in all coming days it shall be a rebuke and a stumbling block to the very harbingers of reappearing tyranny and oppression."

The truth of history calls for a special tribute to our third President, and I trust that the Government will add a Jefferson memorial as an essential feature to the magnificent public building scheme now being developed.

FEDERALIST.

Possibility of Disaster to Big Crowds of Children in Movies—Should Have Adult Attendants.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A thing which I think should receive serious consideration is the possible danger to which young children are exposed when they gather in large numbers at the movies. On Saturday afternoons they attend neighborhood theaters in all parts of the city, in most cases unattended by grown-ups. Their ages generally range from 5 or 6 to 16 or 17 years. I have myself frequently taken children to these Saturday performances and the number of adults is never more, on a rough estimate, than one in ten. I am not thinking now so much about the direct danger from fire as of the danger of a stampede in case of any kind of alarm. Two or more competent and specially assigned attendants—I am not expert enough to say just how many—would obviate the danger to a great extent. So far as my observation goes this precaution does not seem to be given sufficient attention. Such catastrophes as I am worrying about do not often happen, and in the meantime we are apt to grow careless, which is all the more reason why the expert authorities might do worse than look the situation over. Parents themselves, it seems to me, should find out beforehand whether auditoriums are safe where they permit their children to go unattended.

Sewer Openings a Danger to Small Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading an account of the recent rescue of five boys from a sewer where they were overcome by sewer gas, I wonder whether sufficient precaution is always observed in the construction of sewer openings. I quite often see small boys lift manhole covers usually in search of lost balls, when not actuated by the exploring instinct which is common to all youngsters. In such cases mere infants are frequently standing dangerously nearby. I have also observed street-corner storm-sewer openings which looked large enough to let a small child fall through. In fact, I have an indistinct recollection of a case where children were almost washed away and drowned through such an opening, due to a sudden storm. Surely mothers have enough worry over the modern traffic dangers which menace their little ones, and I should think some means might be found to get rid of the menace of the sewer.

Pedestrians Have No Chance When Policemen Blow Whistle Too Soon.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am with "Government Employe," who wants to know why pedestrians do not have a decent chance to cross the streets at intersections. I, too, at the intersection of Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, specially mentioned by her, as well as at other intersections, have before now been caught in a jammed tight place, owing to the fact that the traffic cops "blow their whistles regardless of where the said pedestrians may be." "Why," asks your correspondent, "could there not be some arrangement whereby at such intersections as this the pedestrian would get his chance to hustle across between the movements of the traffic?"

I guess it's because the traffic experts in preparing their rules forget the most important rule of all—the Golden Rule.

Wild Jackass Bloc Trying to Subject District Homes to Search Without Warrant.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Isn't it about time for Washingtonians to take a stand against certain vociferous congressmen who directly or indirectly splash old D. C. with mud?

These gentlemen, known as the wild jackass bloc, never having lived in a city the size of Washington, can not understand why every one does not know everybody else's business, so they go about proposing such laws for us as that of the search without warrant law, and then attack our first line of defense, the police force, for finding it impossible to enforce such a jackass law.

U. S. STEEL TO SPEND 200 MILLION IN 1930

George F. Baker Holds Rank as Largest Stockholder in Corporation.

OUTLOOK HELD BRIGHT

Hoboken, N. J., April 21 (A.P.).—Stockholders of the United States Steel Corporation were told today that their company, expecting 1930 to be "a good average year," was planning to spend $200,000,000 on plant improvements and extensions during the twelve months.

Meeting in annual session here, the owners of the corporation received from James A. Farrell, president, and Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee, the report that operations during the first quarter had averaged 82 per cent of capacity and that the current rate was about the same.

Mr. Taylor, who revealed that the company's budget called for expenditure of $75,000,000 more for improvements than had been set in the December estimate, referred to the stock market crisis last fall as "a very great readjustment in the securities market which to an extent was bound to occur, but which ran beyond its proper point in readjustment."

Says Situation Sound.

Most of the needed changes had taken place, he continued, adding: "We feel that because of these readjustments the situation today is basically sound and that we can face the future with a feeling of assurance, confidence and safety."

"There are no large inventories in the country," he asserted. "This is a very strengthening and wholesome condition. We could hardly hope to continue on an even level with the great activity of last year."

Mr. Farrell was unwilling to make a prediction of the current year's business, although his estimate a year ago of the 1929 total was only $4,000,000,000 above the actual figures. His guess had been $1,500,000,000.

No details of the improvement program were given, but Mr. Taylor reported that officials of the company had made a study of each property to determine the suitability of its equipment and its location with reference to raw materials and markets. As a result, he said, it had been possible to outline policies for the future development of each plant.

Baker Leading Stockholder.

The annual revelation of stockholders' holdings disclosed that all of the largest owners, except J. P. Morgan, had added to their personal holdings last year. George F. Baker increased his 76,000 common shares to 90,000 and retained his position at the head of the list. Part of the increase, it was pointed out, was probably due to Mr. Baker's exercise of rights issued during the year. Mr. Morgan's holdings were unchanged at 1,261 common shares. Mr. Taylor is the second largest stockholder, owning 32,536 shares, an increase of 2,535. Mr. Farrell acquired 200 common shares in 1929, bringing his total to 807. He also owns 4,850 shares of preferred. George F. Baker, jr., increased his holdings from 10,001 common shares to 17,421.

Other prominent common stockholders include John McCormack, tenor, 1,200 shares; Elihu Root, jr., 1,300; Irenee duPont, 12,560 shares; Carnegie Corporation, 52,000; Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, 2,791.

David F. Houston, former cabinet member, was elected to the board of directors to succeed the late Robert Winsor.

Youth Admits Shooting Father to Aid Mother

Dothan, Ala., April 21 (A.P.).—H. C. Woodham, 13-year-old boy, was being held today and his father, G. M. Woodham, was in a serious condition with gunshot wounds which the youth admitted he inflicted to save his mother from being beaten.

"I told him I was going to shoot if he didn't turn her loose," said the boy. "He wouldn't stop and I pulled the trigger."

Green May Oppose Couzens for Seat

Michigan Governor Hints at His Candidacy for Senate.

Lansing, Mich., April 21 (A.P.).—Gov. Fred W. Green intimated today that he might enter the Republican primaries September 9 as a candidate against Senator James Couzens when the latter makes his bid for renomination as United States senator.

The governor said that when any one "wants a fight as a bad as Senator Couzens does some one should give it to him."

This statement was occasioned by the publication Saturday of correspondence between the senator and Elbert H. Fowler, chairman of the recently reorganized Michigan Republican Club. Mr. Fowler solicited Senator Couzens for his support of the Club, pointing out that his affiliation with the organization might guarantee the Michigan senator his renomination without opposition. Senator Couzens was reluctant to come out for the club and said he prefererd opposition.

Gov. Green, persistently rumored as a senatorial candidate, has indicated he will not seek a third term as governor. He said today it was "too early to make an announcement regarding his plans." Attorney General Wilber M. Brucker announced his candidacy for governor today.

as being rather of the attitude of the judge himself, that he appear if requested to do so. The committee decided that it was not for it to take the initiative.

The matter will now come before the Senate with an adverse report. The opposition will be quite outspoken in the debate that follows and indications are that the support will be but lukewarm. It is usually that way, except that this time the opposition will muster the votes. At least it looks that way.

Three Accused In Prison Death

Brothers and Fellow Convict Named in Fatal Try at Jail Delivery.

Providence, R. I., April 21 (A.P.).—Ernest Condello, John Condello and Ralph Colarusso were today charged with the murder of Peleg Champlin, life prisoner at the Rhode Island State Prison, during the attempted jail delivery of Saturday afternoon.

The trio were in the visiting room of the prison when the outbreak occurred.

John Condello has been identified by Harry McVay, wounded prison guard, as the man who shot him. John and his brother Ernest have also been identified by two convicts who were in the prisoners' cage at the time of the outbreak as two of the gunmen.

McVay, a bullet wound in his chest and a bad gash on his scalp as a result of an attack by one of the men with the butt of a revolver, is not expected to recover. Rhode Island Hospital physicians today said the wounded guard had also developed pneumonia.

U. S. JUDGE HEARD SECRETLY IN QUIZ

Senate Subcommittee Is Ready to Report on Tennesseean.

ACTION JUST REVEALED

(Associated Press.)

Informal investigation into the official conduct of Federal Judge Harry B. Anderson of the Western Tennessee district was completed yesterday by a House judiciary subcommittee designated to determine whether further inquiry is necessary.

Judge Anderson met in a closed conference with the subcommittee, headed by Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, who initiated the inquiry. His attorneys, Charles M. Bryan and Walter Armstrong, both of Memphis, also were heard.

Representatives Cumners of Texas and Browning of Tennessee, Democrats, the other members of the group, said they were ready to report their conclusions to the full committee, but declined to make known what they were.

It was disclosed that the subcommittee had conducted a secret inquiry for more than two weeks and had called several persons from Tennessee to testify with regard to the jurist's official conduct. Among the witnesses was Bartlett Tully, of Memphis, a prominent lumberman.

The group also studied for several days information held by the Justice Department with regard to Judge Anderson's activities. The inquiry was started after LaGuardia introduced a resolution instructing the Justice Department to provide the judiciary committee with information obtained by its agents relating to Judge Anderson. Subsequently the New Yorkers introduced a resolution to authorize a subcommittee of five members to determine whether the full group should recommend further action.

The voluntary appearance of Judge Anderson before the committee was an unusual procedure. Senator McKellar and Representative Fisher (Democrats), Tennessee, were instrumental in obtaining the hearing for Judge Anderson.

T. C. Edmonston, Inc., Receiver Is Named

Shortly after T. E. Edmonston, Inc., shoe merchants operating at 1210 G street northwest, had filed a petition in bankruptcy in District Supreme Court yesterday, Justice William Hitz named Matthias Mahorner, jr., receiver. The court's action in naming the receiver was taken at the request of the C. B. Slater Co., which holds a claim against the bankrupt firm. Bond of the receiver was fixed at $20,000.

The petition filed on behalf of the bankrupt firm was not accompanied by schedules, it being explained that they would be filed within the 10-day period allowed by law. Attorneys Tobriner and Graham appeared on behalf of the insolvent firm while Attorney Abbott P. Mills appeared for the Slater Co.

On the Rules of Traffic
By WILLIAM ULLMAN

The necessity of good brakes is recognized by law, for the Washington traffic code is specific on the matter of just how good a driver's brakes must be. If they are inefficient, it is serious for the owner if he is in a collision.

"On a dry, hard, level road," say the regulations, the foot brake must be capable of stopping the car from a speed of 20 miles an hour within 50 feet. The hand brake must be adjusted so that it can stop within 75 feet.

Example: A driver is proceeding at the legal speed limit and on reaching an intersection attempts to stop as another car approaches from his right. They crash and the one driver is held by the police for having bad brakes, a test showing that the foot brake could not stop the car within less than 62 feet. That driver is in trouble.

Tokyo, April 21 (A.P.).—The Japanese Parliament opened today for a three weeks' session which is expected to be a lively one.

The lower house elected Ikunosuke Fujisawa speaker and Sohju Koyama vice speaker. Both belong to the Minsaito or government party. The formal opening presence of the emperor will take place Wednesday.

Heiress and Newsboy Mate In Canada to Seek Fortune

Elopers Still Very Much in Love, Bride Declares; Thinks Mother's Opposition to London Marriage Shows Signs of Being Overcome.

Saint John, N. B., April 21 (A.P.).—Coming to Canada to make their fortune, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cecil Durban, he a former newsboy, she an American heiress, arrived today aboard the liner Montrosse, still very much in love.

They were married in London April 10, despite the objections of Mrs. Durban's mother. Mrs. Durban is the former Vivienne Maud Huntington, daughter of the late Charles Pratt Huntington, wealthy New York architect, and socially prominent here and abroad.

Mr. Durban was backward about talking to reporters, having had few contacts with them, although until his marriage he sold papers outside the railroad station at Folkestone and delivered them in person to the Huntington home, Enwood Manor. Mrs. Durban, however, was perfectly willing, as she expressed it, to share their romance with the world.

"I love him more and more," she said. "We married simply for love."

Telling of their romance, she said she noticed the tall, fair haired newsboy as he delivered papers at the manor and soon they were speaking to each other.

"It was apparent," she said, "that he admired me and naturally I took more interest in him under the circumstances. From these meetings developed secret walks through the pretty lanes in Cheriton until at last we decided to get married."

"We are just two married people," Mr. Durban said, "and there is no reason why every one should be interested."

The Durbans face life in Canada rich in prospects, but poor in purse. Mrs. Durban explained that all her money was in her mother's hands "and we have to go on our own." She expressed the belief, however, that her mother was "coming around gradually."

Mr. Durban has an offer of a job with an electrical firm in Toronto and they plan to go there first to look the field over. In the fan mail received when they arrived were offers of several other jobs, an invitation from the Newsboys' Foundation of Boston to speak at its coming tercentenary celebration, many letters from charitable organizations (contents not disclosed), and one letter from a girl in England asking Mrs. Durban to pick out a Canadian husband for her.

Couple Files Petition For Child's Adoption

Charles H. and Cora Lee Cope, of 2624 Sixth street northeast, yesterday petitioned the District Supreme Court to grant them permission to adopt a baby girl who was born August 29, 1928, under the name of Annabelle Cora Lee Choate, but who is now known as Elizabeth Cope.

The petitioners tell the court that the baby's mother is dead, and that the father, Roy C. Choate, of Houston, Tex., does not object to the adoption. The child has been living with the Copes for some time, it was pointed out. Attorney George C. Shinn appears for the petitioners.

INDIA RAIDERS ELUDE POLICE AND TROOPS

"Sad News," Says Gandhi of Killing of Six; Tension Pervades Bombay.

ATTITUDE OF MOSLEMS

Calcutta, April 21 (A.P.).—Government activities in the Indian situation today still centered on pursuit of the insurgent group which raided the police arsenal of Chittagong Saturday and killed six of the defenders.

Troops and auxiliaries are searching for the raiders, but as yet have not captured them.

Reports from Bombay, Madras and Karachi today indicated that an atmosphere of tension pervaded those cities, but only in Karachi was any large-scale demonstration staged. It caused no trouble. Several hundred women merely marched through the streets carrying pots of contraband salt on their heads.

Mahatma Gandhi, leader of the Nationalists and father of the civil disobedience movement, remained in Gujerat today.

Interviewed regarding the Chittagong incident, he declared it "sad news," but added "however serious the situation becomes there can be no suspension of the fight; there can be no retracing of our footsteps."

Another important Indian leader was in the picture today in the person of the Maulvi Mohammed Yakub, who yesterday presided over the Bombay conference of Indian Moslems. The Moslems of India, he declared, had hitherto left Gandhi and the civil disobedience movement severely alone, would continue to do so, and would not participate in it even if the Hindus conceded all the Moslem demands in connection with the future constitution of India.

ELBOW MACARONI

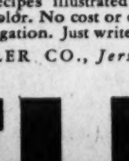
CHILDREN love this decidedly better macaroni. It cooks up lighter and fluffier than any other, with a distinctive taste that entices even the most finicky of childish appetites. Then, too, its small size and elbow shape make it easy to eat. Mueller's Elbow Macaroni is one of the most healthful foods you could give to growing boys and girls. Made of a selected blend of farina—the very cream of the wheat—it is easily digested and contains an abundance of health-giving, body-building elements.

A "Whole Family" Food

Serve this delightfully different food to the whole family; every member will relish the rare lightness and fluffiness that have made Mueller's the largest selling brand of macaroni products in America.

Cooks in Nine Minutes

American housewives frequently overcook macaroni. The rare fluffiness and lightness of Mueller's Macaroni is realized in its ideal form by following the directions on the package and boiling nine minutes. If especial tenderness is desired, one or two more minutes may be allowed. Remember to say "Mueller's" the next time you order from your grocer. He has it or can get it for you.



There are hundreds of ways in which Mueller's macaroni products can be prepared, all delicious. Send for our book of recipes illustrated in color. No cost or obligation. Just write to

Norrises Talk At Breakfast Fete in Club

Couple Entertained by Pen Women of Capital.

By JEAN ELIOT.

THE Norrises—Kathleen and Charles—were the principal speakers at the annual Authors' Breakfast of the League of American Pen Women, held yesterday at the Willard. Kathleen Norris came first, perhaps by virtue of being a woman, perhaps because, unless unexpected opposition develops, she is to be the next president of the League of American Pen Women. At all events, the arrangement gave Mr. Norris opportunity to voice a plaint.

The author of "Bread," "Brass" and other fine novels claims that in his youth he was always "Frank Norris' brother;" that for twenty years he has been "Kathleen Norris' husband," and that now, when he has "helped make his wife what she is today and might devote himself to expressing his own personality, he is beginning to be spoken of as his son's—(another Frank Norris)—father!

Mrs. Norris also spoke in light vein, but with an earnest note when she told how she came to the league for inspiration. Moreover, she put over considerable information about herself and her slant on things in one amusing anecdote, stating that she was "a Catholic, a dry, a pacifist and a vegetarian"—and so she had been advised, when going in for small talk, to discuss aviation.

The traffic lights, which flashed a "stop sign" on the speakers, under direction of Mrs. Louis George Burger, traffic officer, were not used on Mr. and Mrs. Norris, but neither exceeded the three-minute limit.

Mrs. Clarence M. Busch, retiring president of the league, presided with Mrs. Nina Swalm Reed as toastmistress. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, pronounced the invocation. Other speakers we: Mrs. John D. Sherman and Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission; Mrs. Grace Thompson-Seton, who gave some glimpses of travel in the Orient, under the heading, "Sheiks of Fact and Fancy," and Mrs. Fay Cooper Cole, whose subject was "Homeless Husbands." She dealt with the strange manners and customs of tribes which she and her husband had visited in their study of anthropology.

Also on the program were the former Governor of Maine, Carl E. Milliken, now an authority in the motion picture world; Mrs. Bernie Babcock, of Arkansas, author of the Lincoln stories; V. M. Hillyer, headmaster of the Calvert School in Baltimore; Mrs. Elizabeth Burgess, Hughes Collister, short-story writer; Mrs. James M. Doran, wife of the prohibition commissioner; Mrs. William Atherton DuPuy, past national president, and Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, whose "Autobiography of a Chameleon" is just from the presses.

Mrs. Gann, sister of Vice President Curtis, was a guest of honor, seated at the speakers' table. She extended in person an invitation to the delegates to the convention of the League of American Pen Women, which opened with the breakfast yesterday, to be her guests at tea on Thursday. Mrs. Hester Dorsey Richardson was also at the speakers' table, as was Mrs. Theodore J. Pickett.

Many hostesses entertained prominent guests at the flower-decked table. Mrs. Larz Anderson had with her Mrs. Jefferson R. Kean, Mrs. Frances W. Dickens, Mrs. F. A. D. Hancock, Mrs. John P. Story and Mrs. Belton. With Mr. and Mrs. John Walker Holcombe was Mrs. Ovid Jameson, sister of Booth Tarkington. Others glimpsed—to name but a few at random—were Mrs. Porter H. Dale, Mrs. C. C. Dill, Mrs. A. J. Brousseau, Miss Jessie Dell, Mrs. George Oakley Totten, jr., Mrs. Mary Stewart, Mrs. Beale R. Howard, Miss Florence Farnsworth, Mrs. Mark Reed Yates, Mrs. Geneva Dunham.

The Chevy Chase branch of the League of American Pen Women will entertain at tea today for the delegates and alternates to the convention of the League of American Pen Women, Mrs. A. J. Brosseau and Mrs. Clarence M. Busch being guests of honor. The tea will be given in Mme. Bruni's studio at 1614 I street from 5 to 7 o'clock. Mrs. Gann, sister of the Vice President, will be in the receiving line, with Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Guy D. Goff, Mrs. Porter H. Dale, Mrs. John B. Kendrick and others.

Mrs. Kathleen Norris, author and speaker, will be the honor guest at luncheon today of the Women's National Press Club in the Cabinet room at the Willard.

Mr. Curtis to Attend Premiere of Opera.

Senor Diez de Medina represented his country at the recent conferences in Havana and also attended the inauguration festivities of President Machado last fall.

Mr. Swearingen to Wed Miss Eleanor Chamberlain.

The engagement of Miss Eleanor M. Chamberlain, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Weston P. Chamberlian, to Ensign Earl Kendall Swearingen, of the U. S. S. Colorado, was announced at a luncheon yesterday given by Mrs. Chamberlain at the Chevy Chase Club. No date has been set for the wedding.

The Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, Senhor Rubens Ferreira de Mello, has just received orders of transfer to Vienna. Senhor de Mello has been expecting for some time to be detached but was in doubt as to whether his new post would be Vienna or Budapest. With Senhora de Mello and their small son, Senhor de Mello, expects to leave Washington the first week in May and they will be in New York until they sail about May 15.

Senhora de Mello who is Danish by birth, will stop in Copenhagen with her baby en route to Austria to visit her parents whom she has not seen for several years. Senhora de Mello will go direct to Vienna, to be joined later in the summer by his little family.

It is with regret that Washington bids farewell to this attractive couple. They have been most charming hosts throughout their sojourn here.

Mr. and Mrs. Bliss to Sail for Argentina.

The United States Ambassador to Argentina and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss will sail shortly for Buenos Aires. They spent the week-end at the Mayflower Hotel and are at present at the St. Regis in New York.

Mrs. Adams (Harriet Chalmers Adams) is president of the society and Mrs. Huntington, vice president.

Mrs. Huntington was Miss Frances Carpenter, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Carpenter, of Washington. She is preparing to open her charming country home in the mountains above Bluemont, which belonged to her parents and which they purchased from the late George Alfred Townsend, who wrote under the name of Gath.

Miss Frances Virginia Waggaman has rejoined her parents, Maj. and Mrs. Ennalls Waggaman, in Washington, after spending several months in the Orient. Maj. and Mrs. Waggaman have as their guest the Hon. Sophie Watson, daughter of Lord and Lady Thankerton, of London and Edinburgh. They have taken a box for the opera "season" and will entertain at each performance for their young guest.

Guests Enjoy Masked Ball Given at Club

Costumes Are Feature of Event Lasting Till Dawn.

As a colorful climax to the festivities of Easter Monday, a bal masque was given last night at the Congressional Club, members and their guests turning the pages of history or exploring the realm of fancy for original and charming costumes. Many dinner parties preceded the ball, the groups in fancy dress, and breakfast was served just before sun-up.

Spectacular features of the entertainment began at midnight with the entrance of a giant Pandora's Box on wheels. The front was let down to form steps, the roof opened up to form a canopy and within were the judges in regal robes, seated on a great silver throne with decorations of royal purple.

Followed the floor committee, twenty-four 6-footers in Argentine dress, to marshal the masquers for a grand march. The queen of the bal masque was chosen from among the costumed revelers, to be invited to the judges stand and crowned with picturesque ceremony. To the judges—Mr. William E. Leahy, chairman; Dr. P. S. Constantinople, Mr. Fred Geisler, Mr. Martin Rittenhouse and Mr. Bruce Wallace—also fell the important task of distributing prizes for the most original and beautiful costumes and for various dance contests.

A "Ballet of the Sunkist Beauties" from a local theater contributed a bit of variety to the program.

The Minister of Albania, Mr. Faik Konitza, was present at the ball, the guest of Mrs Edward Hood Watson, who also entertained members of the League of American Pen Women in town for their convention. The company included Mrs. Ernest Thompson Seton, wearing a gaily embroidered Middle Kingdom Chinese costume, while Mrs Watson was in authentic Manchu dress; Miss Angela Morgan, of Philadelphia, a poet of great distinction; Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher Hoyt, of Chicago, the latter being Phyllis Fergus, the composer; Col. Allen Gullion, Maj. John Gleason O'Brien, Maj. William Tutherly and Dr. Robert Dieterly. Dr. Dieterly wore Tyrolean costume.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Sanborne—a dashing sheik and a lady of the harem, entertained a party of 26. Dr. John B. Briscoe, a sailor boy, was accompanied by Mrs. Briscoe in Spanish costume. Mrs. William K. Hartung and Mrs. Allen Minnix were costumed in the Chinese manner. Mrs. John Cole appeared as a gypsy maid; Mr. Harry Woodward, as an artist of the Latin Quarter, and Dr. and Mrs. William P. Burns as a jockey and his girl.

Dr. P. S. Constantinople had in his party Miss Patricia Cowling, Miss Elizabeth Brandenberg and Mr. Edward Loose. Mrs. Charles P. McGinley wore a Turkish Nautch dance costume. Mr. Daniel J. Senator Reed Gives Volume Of Rare Issue

First Edition of Milton's "Paradise Lost" Goes to Birthplace.

When Senator David A. Reed, delegate to the London Naval Conference, leaves England, bound for home after several months gruelling labor seeking adjustment to international affairs, he will leave behind in the British capital a memento of an American statesman that shall endure probably as long as any aid extended in the name of naval limitation.

For through the Senator's gift of a copy of the first edition of "Paradise Lost," the cottage where John Milton once lived forever will boast a literary gem of the first magnitude.

It all came about through a visit of Senator Reed's to the Milton cottage at Chalfont, St. Giles, Buckinghamshire, where he went with Mr. J. Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of Great Britain. Receiving a negative reply to his query whether there was a first edition of "Paradise Lost," Senator Reed sent forthwith for the volume which now reposes within the quaint old house.

METROPOLITAN OPERA—APRIL 23, 24, 25.

DEAREST GENEVIEVE: The Easter fashion parade seemed more colorful than ever this year, and one thing it did for us was to settle our minds on which fashions we did or did not like. Buying clothes now will be a much simpler matter, for we will know exactly what we want. The stores have their most complete collections of beautiful frocks and hats now and shopping is sure to be a pleasure.

All attention is focused on the opera on Wednesday night. This will prove the most brilliant event from a fashion standpoint that the city has seen in months.

Underwood & Underwood Are Photographing

—the school children but this week on vacation. This is a perfect time to have pictures made of the children while their spring clothes are new and fresh. A certain mother set aside one morning this week to have her four children of school age photographed. As they have a pretty garden surrounding their home, she decided to have pictures made there. You know, of course, that Underwood & Underwood will send to your home if you wish. If you decide on the spur of the moment to have your photographs made the thing to do is to drop in the studio and take your chances on an appointment.

Many visitors in town this spring take advantage of the opportunity to have pictures made by this famous studio. A picture bearing the signature of Underwood & Underwood is a cherished possession. An excellent grade of photograph may be purchased at Underwood's for only $20 a dozen. This is a favorite selection for pictures of school children. Telephone Dec. 4100 for an appointment.

In the tea room on the second floor you may have service all afternoon. Fountain service is available, and, of course, every one knows they may have tea there. The Hob Nob, 1010 F street, is just across the street from Woodward & Lothrop's. The food is perfectly delicious.

Dainty Flowered Chiffon Frocks

—have arrived in great profusion at Schwartz, 1325 Connecticut avenue. The wonderful news about Schwartz is that all sizes may be found in these delightful frocks as low as $16.50 each. The reason why this shop has such a following is because the models represent the best of the season's fashions, in such nice materials, and such charming patterns, you can scarcely realize they are obtainable at so small a price.

Schwartz is showing, too, printed silks and little sport costumes in all the best fabrics. Sizes are 11 to 17.

Formal Gowns For Opera Wear

—are shown in the exclusive shop of Mme. Ash, Connecticut avenue at M street. Many of the handsomest costumes which you will see in the audience at La Boheme tomorrow night, came from Mme. Ash.

In the collection there is an original model from Patou in white satin, made on classic lines, a perfectly divine creation. There is a pink chiffon with insets of Alencon lace dyed the same shade and a short wrap of chiffon. Patou's opaline pink lace fashions a bridesmaid's gown, and the Patou bridal gown now on exhibit in Mme. Ash's will make any wedding the most important of the season.

Mme. Ash says that last word from Paris emphasizes the favor enjoyed by flowered chiffons. You might have thought considering the vogue for them last year, that perhaps by this time they might be passe. On the contrary the patterns and colorings are more lovely than ever, and the styles quite indescribable. One of the prettiest is in brown and yellow and green shades, in the softest blending. Mme. Ash gowns every one of importance in the National Capital, one season or another.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Originality and Retrospect.

While we were in Hollywood making our picture we found it impossible to broadcast back to the East. In the first place it was necessary that we be prepared to work on the picture at any hour, day or night, and secondly the line charges for broadcasting across the continent run into thousands of dollars and the reception in the East at best is never good when transmitted over 3,000 miles, but radio fans become very devoted and attached to their radio favorites and many of ours seemed to resent our disappearance from the air even after I had told them we would be away for no longer than eight weeks.

These letters from our very devoted fans who upbraided us for going off the air made me very happy. But the letters I received from those who were confined to sick rooms and who found our music a comfort in their illness, and especially some notes I received from a little blind colony just outside of New York—these made me feel slightly conscience-stricken.

Others Imitated Style.

However, something almost laughable had happened in the broadcasting of dance music just before we left for the Coast which made me feel more at ease when I received these letters. It is a well-known fact in theatrical circles that our vaudeville appearances were sensational Nearly every one knew, too, that it was our radio broadcasts which had brought this popularity and it is a truism that whenever any product, person or group of persons achieve success in a particular way or through a particular method, that those who likewise desire to achieve success are quick to adopt the same methods and ideas.

Our sudden rise was the cue for other small and comparatively unknown broadcasting orchestra leaders who had been broadcasting for years, possibly even before we had gone on the air, to drop their own style and to study our presentation over the air in the hopes of discovering just what that something was which had won over our radio audiences. In fact, several of these leaders were frank enough to write or visit me and ask me to show them just how we broadcast and thereby aid them in achieving success. They were honest enough to admit that they, too, hoped that their adoption of our style would result in as great a popularity for them.

Pleased at Creating Vogue.

By July and August just preceding our trip to the Coast, this adoption of our particular style had become a fact according to the thousands of letters which reached me from listeners-in, in which they all asked me if I was aware of this adoption. Many asked me if I was going to do something about it. Some showed me copies of letters, very denunciatory in tone, which they had sent to the radio stations asking them why they permitted such an obvious imitation.

But realizing that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery and realizing that there was room enough for all of us, I said nothing, and in fact was pleased at the vogue we had apparently created. Then, as these unhappy letters from those who missed us reached me, I felt consoled in the thought that in a way those orchestras back East that had admittedly attempted to present a program over the air in the simple style that had brought us such a wonderful reward, these orchestras helped make our absence less keenly felt.

Therefore, on my return from the Coast I made the following statement: "And . . . to any particular imitator or imitators who may have, in their adoption of our style of radio broadcasting, taken our place during our absence, I want to express my sincere thanks and I hope we will find at the receiving end of our broadcast all our old friends and many new ones." The next day I was accused of all sorts of statements.

Entirely Sincere, He Says.

But in the first place I was extremely sincere in what I said and made no references to singing or to any particular act of mine but referred to a particular style of radio broadcast. I had never claimed to be the originator of the crooning style of singing; people have been crooning songs for years, possibly long before I was born. At least ten years ago I used to listen with delight to the crooning records of Charles Kaley, Al Bernard and Marion Harris, and I am very frank to say that I have patterned my style of singing after them. Nor was I the first to play certain fox trots very slowly, as Guy Lombardo and his orchestra were playing numbers in a very slow tempo several years before we organized our group of eight. He was forced to do it by the size of the small cafe in which he played, which made fast dancing impossible. I had never heard his band when we organized, but the first tune we played very slowly was the first tune I sang at the Heigh-Ho, namely, "Rain." I had discovered after listening to this song that in order to understand its lyrics that it must be sung very slowly, otherwise the lyrics became unintelligible or jerky. Then I discovered there were many other such fox trots and, although some people found the slow tempo difficult to dance to, I continued to play that type of song that way in order to properly present the song musically.

Megaphone's Use Necessary.

Eddie Davis was probably one of the first to use the two violins in a small dance orchestra. It was usually thought that one was enough, just as in the days before Whiteman, combinations of saxophones, trumpets and trombones were unheard of and the individual instruments then used were considered just right. In fact, the instrumentation of our band was really the result of the enthusiasm of Don Dickerman, who had heard Eddie Davis use two violins and had liked it greatly. I agreed with him heartily, having heard the same orchestra, and realized that that wonderful quality of two violins in a small dance orchestra is beautiful.

My use of the megaphone came through absolute necessity as, although my voice is very loud when I speak or shout, yet when I use it musically it is not penetrating or strong, and the megaphone simply projects the sound in the direction in which I am singing. What I did was simply to risk the censure of public opinion by using it on every song, and singing many songs through it, because I believe that one of the biggest defects in most people who sing songs is that they get the melody out but not the lyrics. Of course, when I broadcast, I do not use the megaphone, rather do I sing very softly, and this same soft quality is amplified and brought to you over the air. From my mother came a part of the tonal quality of my voice so peculiar to the Irish, and from my father came that French nasal quality which is so apparent on the "n" and "m" syllables, especially over the air. The blending of these Irish and French vocal tones results in a voice peculiarly adapted to the microphone.

Makes Each Word Live for Moment.

My endeavor was to make every word perfectly intelligible and full of meaning; in the words that express emotion and feeling I put emotion and feeling, that is I tried to make the word live for the moment it was being sung; and in aiding me to do this, the megaphone became associated with me so much so that I am often called "the man who originated singing through the megaphone." This is not correct for I did not originate the idea. However, I did invent a megaphone for my own especial purpose. I had noticed that most megaphones made the words more unintelligible than ever, due to the fact that the flare of the cone was so small that people sitting at the sides of the theater could not hear the lyrics at all. So I experimented and devised the large megaphone which I now use, which gives strenkth to the voice and yet makes it possible for every one, even at the extreme right and left of the theater to hear. The manufacturer of my megaphone now tells me that he has received many orders for the size which I have adopted.

But to get back to our particular style of radio broadcast. That is one thing I feel that we at least popularized, whether we introduced it or not.

Hours Spent on Each Program.

Style, of course, includes tempo, but I am going to leave tempo out of the discussion, because, after all, we are really not noted for our slow tempo, though a lot of people may think they are. It was really several other features of our radio broadcasting style that pleased people without their actually being aware of it. Just as I imagine a great many people have liked a particular room, or painting, or any number of things without actually knowing why, just so do many people enjoy our programs without actually knowing why; instead of being bored, they find the programs refreshing and comforting. That is where psychology and thought on my part unquestionably come in. When we first went into broadcasting I spent whole hours on each program, being very careful to present turnes that had a significance of their own. I was very careful, as I said in a previous chapter, that no tunes of similar nature or key should ever follow each other (that is, two Oriental fox trots are never to be found next to each other). Furthermore, by taking the heart of the piece (the chorus) and by presenting just enough choruses of each tune to leave our audiences wanting more, we made groups of numbers that were bound to please nearly every one. Society orchestra leaders played choruses, one after another, for years, but too many choruses of the same tune and without any thought, contrast of type or key, and unknowingly they have bored not only their listeners and dancers, but themselves and their men.

In this particular phase I believe we were the first to play groups of carefully selected choruses in which every chorus was contrasted with the next.

His Style of Announcing.

Again, too, our style includes my method of announcing. I was not the first orchestra leader to announce. Lopez and Ernie Golden have been doing it at their pianos for years. Specht and Bernie were permitted this unusual privilege by the broadcasting companies, but these were rare cases because the broadcasting companies were loath to permit orchestra leaders to make the announcement, as most of them failed to observe the company regulations. Announcements made while the music goes on were not a new idea of mine either, but possibly the idea of making all announcements, stations, commercial and musical, as I used to do on the Herbert Jewelry hour, was a bit novel. It was only because the small stations that I began on allowed me carte blanche in everything I did that I was able to carry out my idea of making all announcements against a soft musical background.

My conception of a perfect radio hour is one that should at all times keep the listener up in the clouds of sentiment and feeling. But when the music stops and a matter-of-fact voice begins in cold speech to name the station, and hour, or discuss a product, the listener is brought back to cold, stark, everyday earth and existence. My intention is that those who listen in our programs shall, from the time we begin to the time we end, be lulled, as it were, into a feeling of happiness, contentment and enjoyment with no disruption or interruptions, which I consider matter-of-fact station or commercial announcements without music are.

I believe it is this effort of mine that has pleased so many people without their really knowing it, and a little reflection may convince you that I am justified in so believing.

No, even if I could, I would not stop those who have adopted our radio ideas from so obviously doing it. There is room enough for all of us and these imitators will, if they are honest with themselves, admit the mimicry which they hope will bring the same reward to them.

And now they ask me, "What do you think of this admiration? How does it affect you?" How could it affect me otherwise than to give me a feeling of ironic pleasure. After all, I have a sense of humor, and I am tempted at times to burst into hysterical laughter when I reflect that the city in which I was once the most lonesome person in the world, with the same appearance and musical gifts that I now possess, today finds me the target for both admiration and criticism almost as great as that which Rudolph Valentino received.

Does Not Seek Publicity.

Right here I must say that I do not seek the publicity I receive. Rather I almost dislike it. Natural publicity, generally true and sound, I enjoy; stunt, sensational and exaggerated publicity I abhor. I employ one press man, and his specific duty is to keep a keen ear close to earth and to try to kill any unfavorable publicity that might be started by those who would drag me down, because it is a fact, all too true, that the bigger one gets, the more one is panned, reviled and hated. But I have enemies, people I have never met, people who do not know me or my work, but who instinctively dislike me and who would hurt me if they could. I know only too well that certain individuals who can not stand seeing one so young and apparently untalented, attain something, will not rest until they see the end. It is sometimes possible to avoid a catastrophe if the warning comes early enough. For that reason this one man tries to present the facts as they are, and to keep me in the minds of people as I would like to be kept. I am not going to attempt to convince any one that I am this way or that way. The greatest tributes to my ideals are the photographs that I have received from the boys who play with me. They have all found me a stern taskmaster, but one who always works for their interests. I have told them that they will never be discharged, no matter what they do, and they know they are assured of a life job with me. We have a world tour which we can begin at almost any time and which will carry us at least four or five years at a good salary for every one. I will not allow my picture work or anything to hurt my relations with the boys who play with me.

Their greatest tribute, as I say, is expressed on the photos they have given me, for nearly all of them have called their inscriptions by calling me the squarest man they have ever known or worked for. I can ask no more than that.

One article said that my main ambition was to make a million dollars. But it is really very much simpler than that . . . after having well provided for my mother and father . . . , what would really give me great happiness is to possess a beautiful home in the country, not elaborate but homelike and comfortable. I played for years for very little, and was very happy, since I play for the sheer love of playing. The same is true today and is quite apparent to a close observer: My boys and I play because we enjoy our work. We receive unheard-of prices because we won a following through long and extremely hard work on the air, and no one can begrudge us what we labored so hard to achieve.

People tell me that our success is fragile, and that the slightest indiscreet action on my part would mean the end. But I like to feel that the bond between us and our true radio admirers and the thousands of sick or unhappy people to whom we have given solace and enjoyment can not be so easily broken and that the end will come only when we cease to bring romance, sincerity, beauty and comfort through our music.

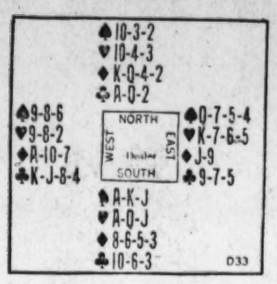
WORK ON BRIDGE

COULD YOU DO BETTER?



The above hand was held in a game of Contract Bridge. South, with only two suits stopped and no biddable 4-card suit, decided that he should pass. West was too weak to think of bidding, and North had no declaration that he thought justified after a pass by South. East, of course, was only too glad to have the hand passed out.

What would you have done had you held South's cards?

THE CORRECT PROCEDURE.

Surely at Auction Bridge, and probably at Contract Bridge, South's bid should have been one No Trump.

All will concede that an original two-suit No Trumper is an extremely dangerous bid at Contract, as it is apt to produce a jump from a partner who stops only one of the defenseless suits; the question is not vitally important because as a matter of fact hands which make the bid debatable do not come to a player oftener than perhaps once a year. Generally one of the strong suits has four cards and then the suit should be bid. But with the above hand, should the declaration be a pass or a No Trump? If South bid one No Trump, North would end the contracting by jumping to three.

In Auction Bridge the bidding would be: South one No Trump, followed by three passes, unless North should attempt to preempt by bidding two No Trumps.

The play of the hand with South a No Trump Declarer would be interesting. West would lead a small Club, which Declarer would pass up to the Ten in closed hand. That hand then should lead a Diamond, and, with West holding up his Ace, dummy would win with an honor.

Trick 3 would be a successful Heart finesse, and trick 4 another lead through West's Diamond Ace. If that Ace be held up again, North wins and establishes South's Diamond by leading a third round. Then all becomes easy. North has two Club entries so that South's Spade and Heart finesse both can be taken and, of course, South can furnish North with the Club finesse; so a small slam can be made with a hand that in actual play was passed out.

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

. . . And what's a summer evening without its flowered chiffon frock . . . for cool loveliness! (Courtesy of Ardanse, Paris.)

Paris, April 21.

I SUPPOSE there is a great weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth among the more buxom and "pleasingly plump" ladies who read the Dare column and know that the normal waistline is here to stay—at the normal waistline. We used to chuckle syrup-tissusly at the way we could fool all the people almost all the time into thinking the best of our figures. But now we've got to tell the world the truth about it, and the truth hurts just a little bit or maybe a whole lot.

Well you can't just sit around and cry about the new mode, you must keep smart and you have to go places and be seen. So the sensible thing to do is to study that normal waistline of yours and make the most of it.

The greatest danger is in belting a dress too tightly. If you are hopelessly and not one whit pleasingly plump, don't wear a belt at all. Let inverted tucks and unobstrusive seams suggest the belt line. Break up the rounded appearance of a belt at the waist by overlapping tabs that fasten onto the skirt of your dress or suit; or hide the belt under loose, flat shirring part of the way around the waist in such a manner that the belt is only open to view in short sections. Wide loops of the material at intervals give length to your waistline.

Nightgowns for sale! Silk ones, real lace trimmed ones, pinks and whites! You see, when I designed this new nightgown from two "lengths" of material, two tiny buttons and so many yards of hemstitching, and found the result so utterly lovely, I wanted to auction off all my old ones and have all new ones like these. And when you discover, by sending your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post that there's practically no sewing—you'll be making money selling your old ones to buy new ones, too.

* * * *

Pale green and ever so faintly printed was this lovely Ardanse model in chiffon. But then, everything of this delightful little couturier's is as charming as she herself is charming.

A simple summer dress, ho ho! Just a wash dress? Ha, ha. Be warned that neither of these exist this year. For you must remember that elegance finds itself expressed in every phase of Miladi's wardrobe, not just in one or two. And summer dresses for the country or summer resort wear; while still executed in tussor and shantung, broadcloth and crepe de chine; while still fairly short, although longer than yesteryear; while still very often sleeveless, are distinguished as belonging to this season by their natural waistline, their removable matching capes or jackets, and particularly by their intricate seamings and pleatings and incrustations.

* * * *

It was Lenief, none other, who designed and made the very unusual costume jewelry set I sketched for you in the corner. The pendant is gold and silver, as is the matching bracelet, and the belt has the same sort of a buckle as the pendant and bracelet, while the belt it self is of gold mesh. Many a delightful exclamation greeted the advent of this set on a pale blue satin frock of Grecian inspiration, and its appearance a moment later on a black crepe afternoon ensemble.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"TAURUS."

IF April 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9:45 a. m., from 5 p. m. to 6:15 p. m. and from 11 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

Domestic disturbances are predicted for this date, which will not soon subside. Worry prophesied to, or through, female relatives. An unexpected journey taken, which will inure to your benefit.

Children born on this date will be full of mischief and will have a hearty desire for adventure. Do not discourage these positive attributes or forget that high spirits and enterprise are gallant qualities and come before the negative virtues appreciated in the nursery.

You have both ambition and energy. You are only pleased with life or yourself when you are fighting for something. It's not the attainment of wealth, position, or something else, which will bring you happiness, but it is the battle for it, the long uphill fight, in which you give your best, and when you are too busy to worry over trifles. You work to live.

There is a bit of adventure in your make-up and you are not afraid, at times, to give up the substance for the shadow. Your shadows lead you a dance, into all sorts of adventures, to triumphs, despairs, and again to triumphs, and to happiness that one can not conceive of in a sheltered existence. You taste of life itself—for you no predigested substitutes. You know from first hand experience what sort of a place the world is. You started living when you were young, and for this reason you will remain young till you are old. Your thrills are not imaginary ones.

If of the weaker sex you are utterly womanly. You are generous, broadminded, compassionate and understanding—a woman with a serious mind and a clever one. You have a heart that is warm, and a soul that is big.

Successful people born April 22:
Jonathan Dickinson—First president of Princeton College.
Eleazer Wheelock—Founder of Dartmouth College.
Z. S. Durfee—Manufacturer.
J. Sterling Morton—Originator of Arbor Day.
Samuel Richards—Artist.
Ada Rehan—Actress.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

"The Home Girls."

Every so often some girl just out of school comes to the column asking how she can meet the demand of her family that she take up the burden of maintaining the home while the rest go to business. These girls feel that they have a right to their lives and that it is unfair to expect them to be satisfied with a monotonous round of housework. And tney are right. For the one girl in one hundred who dreads going out into the business world the job at home is the answer to the problem. For all others it is an unjust demand.

There is in every community the widow who would welcome work by the hour, the young mother who needs a place where she can bring her children to work, the elderly woman who does not care to be supported by married children. These are the ones who should be hired to keep the home running smoothly while the daughters all have equal chance to seek adventure and fortune outside the home.

Two girls today relate their experiences. These things should not be.

Dear Miss McDonald—I am one of the many girls whose lives have been ruined by being forced to stay at home and drudge while the rest of the family go out to business. I have been the servant here for 12 years. I now get the cast-off fur coat of one sister, the stockings with runs in them from another, last year's hat from the other. On Sundays they go off in the car and I get dinner, no matter how hot the day, or how I might enjoy going along.

It has got that I do not even appear with the family now when visitors come in for the evening. I am so changed. And not even a friendly word of thanks. If more bread is needed at table no one would think of going after it. I may be all tired out after getting a big dinner, even make bread, but no matter I must get up for any second helpings. We only just got a washing machine. For all these years I have washed all the clothes and ironed for eight people. And I am a high school graduate the same as the rest. They are out every night to parties, shows, dances. They have beaux and good times. I am the family servant. Occasionally my father will suggest that they be less critical of my efforts, this when a pie is not just to their liking, but not often. The washing machine was bought after I had a break down from which I heartily wish I had not recovered. I am not ashamed to state I have not one spark of affection for any one of my lazy, selfish family. I despise them all.

"THE DRUDGE."

And what this girl should do is demand a salary, save up until she has enough to take a trip, and then go out and find a place for herself in the world. There are hundreds of widowers who would give anything for such a housekeeper and no private home would dream of asking her to do laundry work. In New York she would be paid $100 a month just to cook for eight people! There is still a world outside this girl's kitchen if she will assert herself and seek it. In a year she would be unable to believe that once she meekly slaved for a few old clothes. Home makers are well paid, except in their own homes!

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

DANGER OF BEING BABY.

IS THERE any way that baby life can be made secure during the first three months? All of the marvelous improvement of the last twenty-five years has related to life after three months of age. What to do for babies less than three months of age is now the question. Several suggestions have been made. One is that all prospective mothers have a Kahn or Wasserman test, and if this be positive, that the pregnant woman and later her baby be given specific treatment. Another is that expectant mothers be watched more closely to prevent puerperal convulsions, with the great hazard of that condition to both mother and child. This calls for close attention to the mother's weight, her blood pressure, the condition of her kidneys and nausea, and other symptoms of acidosis. A third suggestion is that obstetric, medical, and nursing service be improved. And here is a fourth:

Dr. Herbert Evans has found that a vitamin, which he calls E, has much to do with propagation. When lower animals get plenty of this vitamin they breed often, they have large broods, the young thrive, they survive the perils of babyhood, and they mature satisfactorily. If, on the other hand, they are fed a diet which is deficient in E, these animals do not mate, or they do not bear young, or the litters are small, or the young die in babyhood on slight provocation, or from no cause at all. The proposal is that prospective mothers eat freely of vitamin E foods during the last two months of pregnancy and in the case of nursing mothers during the first three months of the baby's life. If the baby is bottle fed it is proposed to draw on the same food sources for foods which can be added to the baby's milk to supply vitamin E. This he needs to get a toehold on life The vitamin E foods are common. They are edible. In fact, many of them are parts of our customary diet, though the quantity of them eaten may need to be increased. From them extracts can be made which will be within the digestive powers of a baby just as we have made orange juice, cod liver oil, and thin cereals to be.

IT IS DISEASE SYMPTOM.

G. J. writes:

1. What causes albumin in the urine?

2. Can same be eliminated and how?

3. Would frequent colds in the winter months cause albumin?

4. What foods contain albumin?

REPLY.

1. Bright's disease of any one of the several kinds, infections of the urinary tract, blood in the urine, perhaps rapid growth, and certain kinds of work.

2. Albuminuria is a symptom. The treatment depends on the disease which causes it.

3. Yes, by causing Bright's disease.

4. Nearly all foods contain some albumins. The exceptions are oils and sugars.

Oranges and Grapefruit.

T. P. P. writes: I am much interested in your recent remarks as to the effects of drinking orange juice in generous quantities and would like to have you state whether the juice of grapefruit has similar effects. If it has, I should be interested to know how it compares with orange juice, if such a comparison is available.

REPLY.

Probably grapefruit ranks well up with orange juice, but I know of no comparative tests of it. The subject is new and few foods have been tested by the new standard.

What Nervous Heart Is.

J. C. writes: What is a nervous heart? What causes it?

REPLY.

A heart that is irritable is easily excited, beats rapidly or irregularly. Among the causes are goiter, excessive use of tobacco or coffee, nervousness.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

DO YOU think that if I purchase a good quality of pansy seed and sow it at once in flats that I would have blooming plants this season? I know there is a diversity of opinion about this matter.

LILLIAN H.

To obtain the best results pansy seed should be sown in August, using fresh seed of the year if procurable. Sow seed in a coldframe, in drills 2 inches apart. Make the drills run lengthwise from east to west. After sowing, water well with a hand sprinkler and cover with newspaper. Pansy seed will germinate in about nine days. When the plants have developed their second leaves, thin out by setting some between the rows and encourage growth by giving them plenty of sunshine and water. The idea is to get a sturdy rather than a quick growth to prepare them for the winter. The above method is the usual one followed by most gardeners, but it is not the only practical way to grow pansies. If started in the house from February until April pansies will begin to bloom from July on; sown outdoors in May beautiful flowers are produced in the fall.

Please tell me the name of the plant of which I am inclosing a leaf.

MRS. D. D.

Coleus.

Please tell me the name of the plant of which I am inclosing a leaf. Please, also, tell me where to keep the plant. At present I have it in a northern exposure where there is little heat, but even so it is turning yellow. Also tell me whether calla lily bulbs will live in the open. Mine refuse to live or at least grow much indoors.

J. C. O.

The leaf you inclosed was from a dracena. This plant requires a moist, warm atmosphere. Remove it at once to a warm, sunny, well-ventilated place and water it every other day. Calla lilies require a compost of two-thirds good loam and one-third well-rotted cow manure with a dash of sand to keep it open. Ample drainage should be provided. Set the roots so that the crown or sprout is above the level of the soil. Calla lilies should not be placed in the dark like many bulbs; they may be put outdoors to root (start bulbs in August), but be sure to bring them indoors before the weather begins to get chilly, as the slightest frost will damage them and be likely to kill them. They require a great deal of water while making their growth. After the flowering season is over water should be gradually withheld and the pots turned on their sides and allowed to dry out. The roots may be shaken out of their old soil in August and repotted as before.

I have made a flowerbed 3 by 6 feet, which received full sun from 10:30 a. m. until 2:30 p. m. I would like to buy one plant each of some of the following perennials, but don't know how many plants a bed of this size will hold. Hardy asters, hardy phlox, columbine, canterbury bells, blue larkspur, sweet Williams, foxglove, Oriental poppy, blue scabiosa, coreopsis and stokes aster. Please tell me if any of these are difficult to grow and which would you eliminate from the list. Can I use bonemeal for the entire bed or do some of the varieties I have mentioned require other fertilizers? Our soil is average.

MISS ELLA F. H.

In so small a bed you will have a much more satisfactory and surely a more pleasing effect if you confine your choice to two or three varieties. A bed of larkspur and shasta daisies would be easily cared for and pleasing. Or planted with shasta daisies, forget-me-nots and coreopsis, such a bed would be lovely. Use bonemeal for all perennials.

CONVICT SHIP

NOW IN WASHINGTON, SEVENTH STREET WHARF

This Old Craft Has Been Visited by Over 21,000,000 (Twenty-One Million) People

Including Most of the Crowned Heads of Europe, and Has Received Patronage of Many of the Leading State and City Officials and Clergy of All Denominations Since Her Arrival in America

THE OLDEST SHIP AFLOAT (LAUNCHED 1790). RAISED FROM THE BOTTOM OF SYDNEY HARBOR, AUSTRALIA, AND NOW ON A FINAL TOUR OF THE WORLD

A Relic of the Barbaric Days When, for a Minor Offense, a Man Could Be Transported Overseas

For THE TERM of his NATURAL LIFE

When the Convict Ship Was Launched in Far Away India in 1790—

1—Buffalo was the western frontier of America.

2—George Washington was serving his first term as President of the United States.

3—There were 145 offenses punishable by death in England.

4—Napoleon was only 21 years old and the battle of Waterloo was still 25 years in the future.

ROMANCE

To view her massive yellow hull, stamped with the sinister black, broad arrows of the British penal system; her tall and mighty spars, which formerly flew her arrow-marked sails in many latitudes; her graceful figurehead, reminiscent of the days when fine deep sea ships were loved as women; and her stately quarter deck and broad stern, is to whiff the great salt water ocean and realize something of ships and men of other days.

For she has sailed the Seven Seas, plowing her way through water and winds in many climes, with cargoes ranging from precious jewels of the Orient to wretched and suffering human beings herded below her decks like cattle. Nabobs of India and Siam have sipped tea on her quarter deck. Dusky princesses of the East have been entertained in her cabins. Hundreds of pitiful prisoners have died in her dungeon cells.

Pirates have chased her and more than one desperate battle has been fought across her solid decks. Her massive hull and her mainmast still bear the marks of pirate shots fired at her by black-flagged ships in the Indian Ocean.

Today she is the last vivid reminder of the master sea fictionists of another day, authors like Clark Russell and John Boyle O'Reilly, whose pen pictures antedated the red-blooded, blue-sea stories of London, Melville and Conrad. She forms your only chance to see a ship like those of which you have read.

PATHOS

She is a floating monument of the most pathetic human drama ever played; a startling reminder that 100 years ago, and even less, women and little children, as well as men, were punished with life-long suffering and ignominy for trifling offenses. Aboard her may be seen the ring-bolts and chains to which were fastened beautiful girls, often convicted wrongly, but nevertheless compelled to helplessly endure the terrors of a voyage of 16,000 miles across the high seas completely under the domination of brutal warders.

While young women became gaunt and wrinkled, boys and girls of eight and nine years of age, transported for stealing apples or a two-penny pie, became hardened criminals from the sights they saw and the punishment they endured. For age and sex did not spare the victim of the convict ship from the heavy irons, the cat-o'-nine tails, the whipping posts, the branding irons and the tiny air-tight dungeon cells below the water line to which they were thrust for the slightest infraction of the rules.

There is shown the figure of Elizabeth Stott and her child, transported for life, after death sentence had been commuted by King George III, to the penal settlement of far off Australia for the alleged forging of the equivalent of fifteen dollars. What became of them after she boarded ship and was placed in iron, God only knows. The records are mute.

No story ever written, no sermon ever preached, no drama ever acted, no scene ever thrown upon a silver sheet can vie in pathos with the silnt testimony of this ancient vessel and her original cells and tortures, every one of which you may actually see and feel during your visit.

HISTORY

The Convict Ship teaches more strikingly than a thousand-page volume or hundreds of photographs the story of human progress during three centuries. She was a link between the Orient and the Occident in the days when, as the pride of the vast East India Company's fleet, she carried wealthy and noble passengers from England to India, and, returning, brought invaluable cargoes of tea, spices, silks and jewels from Calcutta to London. As a dread felon transport, she carried miserable and often innocent men, women and children from England to Van Dieman's Land and the penal colonies at Botany Bay, Australia, starting the growth of a new continent.

She was an outcast from all traditions, from all the civilized world, from humanity itself, when, moored in Hobson Bay, Australia, she was a hulk or floating prison used for the torture of those condemned to a living death in a prison which, as can be vividly seen, makes the Bastile, the Kremlin and the Tower of London at their worst seem habitable. She created maritime history when, under her own canvas and unescorted, she sailed first from Australia to England, and then from England to the United States, crossing the broad Atlantic in 96 days. Since her arrival in this country she continues to make history, the number of her visitors, ranging into the millions, far outstripping that of any exhibit ever shown here.

THIS WONDERFUL VESSEL HAS MADE HISTORY DURING THREE CENTURIES

She is the oldest ship in the world, and the only convict ship afloat out of that dreadful fleet of ocean hells which sailed the Seven Seas in 1790 A. D. She is unchanged after all these years, nothing being omitted but her human freight and their sufferings from the cruelties and barbarities practiced upon them.

She has held lurid horrors and dreadful iniquities besides which even the terrible stories of the Black Hole of Calcutta and the Spanish Inquisition pale into insignificance.

Aboard her are now shown, in their original state, all the airless dungeons and condemned cells, the whipping post, the manacles, the branding irons, the punishment balls, the leaden-tipped cat-o'-nine tails, the coffin bath and the other fiendish inventions of man's butality to his fellow-men. She marked the beginning of the end of England's monstrous penal system.

From keel to topmast she cries aloud the greatest lesson the world has ever known in the history of human progress.

THE CONVICT SHIP WILL NEVER AGAIN BE SEEN IN WASHINGTON

Your opportunity to visit her is NOW. If you do not seize it, yours will be the regret at not having seen the greatest and most extraordinary exhibition that ever visited this city. When you walk her decks, grooved with the chains of her miserable victims, the past will speak to you of its sad, mournful lesson, but you will leave feeling better because you live in a better age. Wealthy Americans spend millions annually in visiting Europe's old castles and the prison dungeons. Today a short ride brings you alongside the oldest and most notorious floating prison the world has ever known. Do not miss this profound illustration of one of the most vital factors in the betterment of the age. During the period of the ship's stay in Washington the public will be admitted aboard every day from 10 A. M. to 11 P. M.

RIGHT TO JAIL RUM NOVICES ATTACKED

Habeas Corpus Action Hits at Police Court Power in First Offenses.

BITTER FIGHT LIKELY

Right of the Police Court of the District of Columbia to send persons convicted of first offense possession under the national prohibition act to jail was attacked yesterday in a habeas corpus petition filed on behalf of Lawrence W. Dodd through Attorneys James A. O'Shea, John J. Burnett and Alfred Goldstein.

Dodd was convicted April 1 in Police Court on a first-offense possession charge and was sentenced yesterday to pay a fine of $300 or serve 60 days in jail. He was committed to jail in default of payment of the fine.

Justice William Hitz signed the writ of habeas corpus and permitted the man his liberty under $500 pending a hearing on the merits of the petition. Bond was furnished by Milton S. Kronheim and the man was immediately released.

Jail Terms Held Invalid.

The petition contends that the Police Court can not sentence a man to jail for first offense possession of liquor, even in lieu of payment of a fine. All that court is empowered to do under the law is to levy a fine, according to the attorneys.

Attorney Burnett pointed out that the issuance of the writ that Justice Peyton Gordon in District Supreme Court recently had before him a case in which only a fine had been levied on a liquor charge and refused to substitute a jail term for the money. At that time the justice remarked that if the fine were not paid it would have to stand against the defendant's property.

The majority of persons convicted in Police Court of first offense possession have no real property and if the contention of Dodd's attorneys is sustained at a hearing the effect will be to permit such offenders to walk out of court if unable to pay a fine.

Action Considered Test.

The habeas corpus petition is considered in the nature of a test, and it is probable that the Government will bitterly contest it.

Intent of Congress is involved in the matter. Attorney Burnett pointed out that while the District Supreme Court under the national prohibition act is not authorized to impsoe more than a 90-day sentence for second offense possession Police Court is empowered to sentence a convicted defendant to one year. This alleged discrepancy in the powers of the two courts in similar cases was not the intent of Congress, it is alleged.

Infidelity Is Alleged As Woman Sues Mate

Accusing her husband of being intimate with an unnamed woman in a local hotel on several occasions in 1928, Mrs. Mildred Lybarger Wilder, of Thirteenth street northwest, near Belmont road, yesterday petitioned the District Supreme Court to grant her an absolute divorce from George Durand Wilder, jr., of Fifteenth street northwest, near N street.

The couple married on November 21, 1922, at Reading, Pa., and have two children, according to the wife Mrs. Wilder asserts that she left her husband on February 1 last, and took the children with her when she belatedly learned of his alleged unfaithfulness. The wife, who is represented by Attorneys Proctor, Brashears & Townsend, requests that she be awarded permanent custody of the children and adequate allmony.

Policeman Dismissed For Failure to Pay Bill

Although the complainant tried to retract his charges against Private J. H. Fling, of the Tenth Precinct, when the policeman paid his bill, the retraction did no good and the Commissioners yesterday confirmed a Police Trial Board verdict of dismissal from the police force. Dr. W. C. Gwynn complained that Private Fling had not kept his promise to pay him $31.60.

Dismissal of Private J. G. Schulz, of the Fire Department, also was approved by the District Commissioners yesterday. Private Schulz was arrested near North Capitol street and Massachusetts avenue on March 1. He was said to have been intoxicated and to have been seen removing articles from parked automobiles.

$25,000 Suit Is Filed For Injuries in Crash

Julius R. Phillips, of G street southwest, near Sixth street, filed suit yesterday in District Supreme Court seeking to recover $25,000 damages from Thomas E. Rodgers, of Massachusetts avenue northeast near Ninth street.

Phillips tells the court that he was injured March 9 last when his automobile was struck at Seventh and C streets southwest by a machine belonging to the defendant. He claims permanent injuries. Attorney Hyman Waldman appears for the plaintiff.

Office Is Rifled.

Frank Carnahan, of 1601 Argonne place northwest, reported to police yesterday that someone entered his office in the Union Trust Building, at Fifteenth and H streets northwest, some time after 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, by jimmying the door, and thoroughly rifled the room. The chief loot was a metal cash box containing two Post Office money orders for $100 each, and several valuable receipts and papers.

An invitation has also been sent to Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby to attend the drill. The competitive regimental drill which was postponed last Thursday because of rain will be held next Monday at the Wilson Memorial Stadium at Central High School.

CONOCO IS NOT THE ONLY OIL THAT IS DE-WAXED, BUT IT IS THE ONE AND ONLY LUBRICANT THAT CAN BE GERM-PROCESSED!

SIX months ago Conoco announced that it was ready with a new motor oil. On that day, the entire facilities of Conoco were placed behind this product.

Every advantage known to other oils was incorporated in this new lubricant. Paraffin base .... de-waxed .... zero fluidity .... high flash and fire .... full-body .... and then to cap it all, the Germ Process, possessed by no other oil! The exclusive Germ Process, by adding an oily-essence lacking in all other oils, gives to this oil an entirely new characteristic — "Penetrative Lubricity"—the faculty of penetrating and combining with metal surfaces.

CONOCO

Every hope for performance and protection in motor oil .... everything you have known that an oil should be .... is definitely present in this fastest-selling oil in oil history. Anything else we could say would be anti-climax. We do ask that you verify our pledge, accept our challenge, at the next Conoco Red Triangle you see. Will you?

HIGH LIGHTS OF GREAT WORLD WAR

In June, 1918, we were on our way "over there," aboard the U. S. S. George Washington, and a couple of enlisted men of my company were discussing submarine warfare as follows:

Private Hinson: Well, sergeant, if anything should hit the old tub and sink her we'd have to take up residence in either heaven or hell.

Sergt. Dyitt: Yes, Hinson, that's true.

At the very moment Dyitt made his reply what appeared to be a submarine periscope was sighted off the port side of the ship and the guns were ordered into action.

Bang! Bang!!

"There," echoed Private Hinson. "Just as I expected. We're right in hell."

Afterward the "periscope" was discovered to be a loose fish trap which was demolished with the second shot.

Very Snappy!

In '17 there were a number of wet spots outside the gates of the Presidio of San Francisco.

A bunch of recruits were standing around in front of one of these places when along came an officious reserve officer—very active and obviously craving salutes.

One recruit had gone alomst through the motion, when he was immediately pounced upon and given an official demonstration in the art of military etiquette and simultaneously admonished to "salute with a snap."

The recruit promptly brought his hand up to the prescribed salute, then brought it down quickly "with a snap" of the thumb and finger.

The Right Guide

"So this is Paris" was the simultaneous remark coming from both Henry's mouth and mine as we emerged from the Gare d'Orleans (railroad station), and the oft-looked-for "sunny France" at last greeted us. An M. P. directed us to Rue St. Anne, where we registered, and then free from care we hit the boulevards. We sniffed a "snifter" or so on the terrace of the Cafe de la Paix, and were "at ease" as we never were before. We held converse with others at nearby tables, and learned a whole lot about the "customs" of Paris; we even attempted conversation with several who sat down near us and asked, "You geev me cigarette?" in a most insinuating manner. We left to investigate new fields and to seek new thrills, and were soon convinced that the description of the Boulevard de la Madeleine as contained in the guide book, "Paris, for Englishmen and for Americans," contained the unvarnished truth: "Here," says that booklet, "you will meet with the most cosmopolitan sort of public; allied soldiers, of all ranks and stations. Feminine beauties, strollers, business men, celebrities all meet there. Many women, professional females, beauties in all sorts of more or less suggestive costumes or extravagantly dressed, come and go, gesticulate, make a most engaging smile and are not afraid to wish you 'good morning' in English to show you that they know your language. All this is queer and amusing." By closing time we had sat at all the terraces on one side of the boulevard, and if memory serve me right, were about half way down the Rue Royale.

Save the Suit!

While serving in the armed guard, U. S. Navy, during the war I was on a British ship doing duty as a signalman. It was on February 19, 1917, about 10 a. m. and there were ten ships in the convoy, headed for England, and suddenly there was a dull boom and the largest ship in the convoy, the S. S. Philadelphian, started to sink and turn over. Then a minute later there was another dull explosion and the S. S. Glen Carron started to go down bow first. We were all dodging tropedoes and, during the excitement, I went down below and got my dress blue uniform that I had just bought that trip. I laugh to myself now that during all the excitement my concern was for my dress uniform. I guess I must have figured on swimming to England with that suit in my hands.

Very, Very Funny

While American Hospital Train No. 56 was rumbling back from the front with its cargo of wounded and gassed, during the latter part of October, 1918, even among the badly wounded there was an excellent spirit shown by them, as the following incident will prove.

As acting chief nurse of the train in question, making my morning rounds and asking each patient if there was anything that I could do for him, I was quickly asked by a young captain to please scratch the sole of his left foot, he apparently being in dire need of attention. I hastened to meet with his request, but being unable to locate this member of his body, I pulled up the covers from the bottom of the bunk to find that not only his foot but his leg to the knee had been amputated.

The reaction to this was a very merry ha! ha! from all the buddies when he shouted to me, "The joke's on you," and needless to say it was.

Cafe Noir—Pas Sucre

The snow and slush was about 6 inches deep and we were in the midst of a six-day hike, somewhere in France. Wet, glum and tired after marching between 15 and 20 kilometers, the men gave vent to their feelings by making nasty remarks to the cook at supper time. Cook Mac, to drown his sorrows, took a quantity of sugar, which was promptly accepted in payment for a bottle of sognac, and proceeded to have a little party all to himself. After a few drinks Cook Mac began to feel that after all it was a pretty good war for him and that in return he was going to do something for the men on the morrow.

He then proceeded to prepare the next morning's breakfast and a good one, too, which he placed in the stove where a low fire was smoldering. Then making an exceptionally large boiler of coffee, he called the guards, who had just come on duty, asked them to assist him in placing the coffee on the stove, gave orders that a roaring fire be kept up for the rest of the night and staggered off to bed.

The next morning we received only about a quarter of a cup of black coffee with no sugar for breakfast before we started on the hike. At roll call Mac answered to his name, but he answered as Private Mac, instead of cook.

A Former War

Prior to Pershing's punitive expedition into Mexico I was stationed at El Paso, during which time I witnessed through field glasses the evacuation and capture of Juarez five different times—in three of which not a shot was fired.

Two international bridges span the Rio Grande River connecting these two towns and a single-track car line operates over one of these bridges, making a circuitous route through Juarez thence returning over the other.

Curious American tourists were daily flocking across the boundary in search of adventure or perhaps the more fascinating lure of keno. One evening I took advantage of the occasion by going over in mufti, and was just about getting lucky when the proprietor of the hall calmly announced a fire nearby, requested every one to vacate tables.

At this time the town was occupied by Orosco and his band of red-flaggers; evidently some of them had looted and fired a liquor store, becoming thoroughly saturated from the contents, and apparently bent on some sort of revenge, deliberately stopped the street cars from operating. By this time eleven of us from the American side had grouped together and started to walk over but on approaching the bridge a horde of inebriated red-flaggers hissed, jeered and drove us back at the point of the bayonet.

We subsequently spent several uncomfortable hours when finally about midnight they permitted the cars to cross over. The eleven of us got aboard the first one and when within a few hundred yards of the bridge the car was suddenly stopped by the incensed outlaws and we were abruptly yanked off, whereupon the car was allowed to proceed on over.

The ruffians seized and forced us roughly against the walls of an old adobe customs house where we momentarily expected to fall victims of a firing squad. There was no possible means of escape and we were entirely at their mercy. Suddenly from somewhere came an old grizzled customs official—frantically gesticulating and vociferously expostulating with the leader who sneeringly ogled us with a baleful leer. Later we were sent uptown to see Orosco—at a fiesta—who was astonished on hearing our predicament; after hastily telephoning he wrote us out a pass and assured us we would have no further difficulty, so in the wee sma' we arrived over, safe and thankful, none the worse perhaps, but just a little wiser

Underwriting in FIRE INSURANCE

Who shall, or shall not, be insured; what property shall, or shall not, be covered; and what amount of insurance shall be accepted, if any? These are problems which daily face the underwriter.

Fire insurance companies do not insure property, but do insure and safeguard the interests of persons or corporations in property.

The property owner's character, financial ability to possess and maintain the property, the usefulness of the property to its owner, his fire record, if any, and other pertinent particulars, concern the underwriter.

Property to Be Covered

The type of property to be covered, be it dwelling, mercantile, manufacturing or personal property, as well as construction, occupancy, fire protection, exposure, damageability, amount of insurance carried compared with the value of the property, along with many other conditions, must be studied by the underwriter.

The underwriter is equipped with insurance maps, surveys, engineering data, confidential character and financial reports, fire records, and other information upon which to base his judgment of a particular line of insurance.

Broad Experience

Underwriters of Stock Fire Insurance companies are men of broad experience who are carefully trained in the selection of desirable, and in the avoidance of undesirable, risks.

The Underwriter renders an important public service by endeavoring to avoid insurance on risks that are likely to produce illegal or questionable claims and a consequent effect on the cost of fire insurance.

LOITERING Along FASHION LANE

BY THE SAUNTERER

WHAT with the ladies helping make the laws of the country . . . taking charge of offices . . . and otherwise usurping the sacred privileges of men . . . it is not any wonder that they are influencing the masculine manner of dress.

With the return of elegance in feminine modes a man simply must do his part to keep up with it. The opera . . . coming to the Fox Theater Wednesday, Thursday and Friday gives us an opportunity to display our finery.

For myself I selected this outfit at The Hecht Co.'s Men's Shops.

First of all, a Society Brand full dress at $75. The waistcoat in white pique may be either single or double breasted at $6 . . . others at $8. If you want there is also a Sheldon full dress at $50.

Second Floor, The Hecht Co.

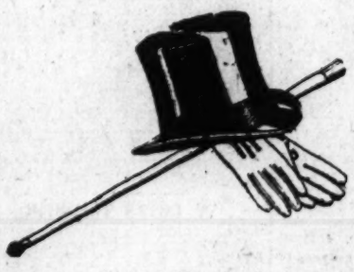
On the Main Floor Men's Shop I found a Manhattan plain bosom shirt at $3.50. With it I chose an Arrow wing collar at 35c. For the tie . . . a white dress tie at $1.

Second Floor, The Hecht Co.

Main Floor, The Hecht Co.

Getting to the bottom of things I chose a pair of black silk Phoenix Hose at $1. The suspenders were striped in black and white. Made by Pioneer, costing $1.50.

Main Floor, The Hecht Co.



Dobbs Hats of course, are high hat . . . but not so you can notice it. The correct shape has a medium high crown with 2-inch band. $18.

I must have a cane, all well-dressed men must . . . so I purchased a straight ebony one with a sterling handle, $4.95.

Main Floor, The Hecht Co.

Back again on the Second Floor a pair of Foxmodel Dress Oxfords caught my eye. I secured them for $10.

Mrs. Von Steinner Victor In Miller Trophy Tourney

Beaver Club Player Has Low Net and Low Gross Scores of 78 and 87; Mrs. Nicolson Second as 50 Women Play.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

A FIELD of more than 50 women golfers of the District competed yesterday in the Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial Trophy tournament on the course of the Washington Golf and Country Club, where the late Mrs. Miller, during her lifetime, was the recognized club champion, besides serving for several years as the secretary of the Womens' District Golf Association.

The event was held under the auspices of the association under the presidency of Mrs. Frank B. Keefer and the competition was eighteen holes, medal play, handicap allowance.

Mrs. Alma von Steinner, of the Beaver Dam Club, had the low gross score, 44—43—87, and with her 9 handicap, was also low net with 78. As the low net won the trophy, with the winner's name on the memorial scroll, Mrs. von Steinner selected her low net score, which also carried with it a handsome set of sherbet cups. Mrs. Hugh T. Nicolson, District amateur champion, with a score of 45—45—90, was thereupon awarded the low gross prize, a silver cream pitcher and sugar bowl, these prizes having been donated by Capt. Watson Miller in memory of his wife.

Mrs. Eynon Has Card of 91.

A remarkable score of 91 was turned in by Mrs. Everett Eynon, who played the course for the first time. She was out in 44, a card which equalled Mrs. von Steinner's for the outward journey, but had trouble on five holes on her return journey, failing to do better than 47. Her ranking with third low gross made her the recipient of many congratulations. The cards of the three leaders:

Out—
Mrs. von Steinner	5	3	5	7	4	5	6	5	4	—44
Mrs. Nicolson	4	4	6	5	5	5	5	6	5	—45
Mrs. Eynon	5	3	6	5	5	5	5	6	4	—44
In—
Mrs. von Steinner	4	5	4	5	5	4	5	5	4	—43
Mrs. Nicolson	5	4	5	5	5	5	5	5	5	—45
Mrs. Eynon	5	4	5	5	5	5	5	5	4	—47

If there had been three prizes, Mrs. William E. Hall, of the Washington Club, would have won the second low net with a card of 96—14—82, but as Mrs. von Steinner elected to take the low net prize instead of low gross, and Mrs. Nicholson was second low gross, the committee decided to award the prizes as indicated. Mrs. William S. Corby, Columbia; Mrs. McCook Knox, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Everett Eynon were in a triple tie for the net of 86.

WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, APRIL 22, 1930. 15

NATS, HADLEY ON MOUND, STOP ATHLETICS, 6-3

Peglets

NEW YORK, April 21.—The Federal Trade Commission has just made the interesting discovery that some of the professional athletes, particularly the golfers, have been deceiving the public with insincere testimonials for certain brands of golf balls, belts, double-breasted bloomers and so forth, from which I would infer that the Federal Trade Commission is not overly alert.

Apparently having little else to do, the commission is planning to hold a hearing at which some of the boys who have attributed their success to various articles of commerce will be called upon to prove that they have actually used these wares in championship competition and that they would not have done as well if they had used other brands of goods. This is referred to as the testimonial racket, and the word racket has come to bear such a sinister meaning that one might suspect the boys of having committed some serious wrong.

I do not see why the Federal Trade Commission is starting in on the golfers, for of all the testimonials which one reads in the advertisements nowadays theirs are the least harmful. At the worst, their victims can only be induced to buy certain articles which they would buy inevitably anyway, without any urging.

Golf Is Mental Disorder.

Golf is first of all a mental disorder, the symptoms of which are faith and gullibility. The patients are always experimenting with new weapons of strange shapes and cluttering their club lockers with new articles of apparel with which they hope to improve their golf. These are quickly abandoned, however, and no golfer's bag is ever definitely organized or his costume finally selected.

If he sees another golfer hit a remarkable iron shot to a green where he has always had trouble himself, his mental processes, if those hallucinations which take place in the head of a golfer may be called mental processes, are such that he may be unable to rest until he has paid $45 for a leather bag exactly like the one used by the man who made the remarkable approach to the green.

Give a golfer ten years in the game and the hall closet of his house will be a jumble of warped woods and rusted irons and putters, all with bowed shafts, which he has bought at various times. The hooks and hangers in the closet will be draped with a dusty wardrobe of sweaters and leather jackets, and the floor will be knee deep with parlor putting devices, captive balls on rubber leashes, used for driving practice in the back yard, old golfing gloves and belts, moldy golf shoes with various types of soles and cleats, and abandoned golf bags. None of these articles will have been used up.

Commission Can't Kill Hope.

They will have been discarded after brief trials as the phantom of hope lured him on to new experiments and no action of the Federal Trade Commission ever will change this. Nor should it. Those manufacturers of golfing utensils who have squawked to the commission about the testimonial racket show a poor understanding of the unfortunates whose feeble-mindedness keeps their factories active. They should realize that about 80 per cent of the golf clubs, bags and apparel which are sold in the course of a year are replacements of material bought the year before which are still as good as any other golf clubs, bags and apparel for the purposes of those who purchase them. And while it may be true that Gene Sarazen's written approval of a certain club, bag or sweater will induce a large number of victims to buy, it is also true that these purchases will be discarded in disgust and resentment before very long in favor of the next manufacturer's goods.

At last year's National Open Tournament, Walter Hagen, was wearing a certain type of open-faced underwear, with a shirt cut quite decolette, like weskit of an evening suit, and his manager, Mr. Robert Harlow, was temporarily at loss for a way to impress the novel design of his man's lingerie on the public. Mr. Hagen was receiving a sum of money from the manufacturer for serving as his male mannequin in the National Open and Mr. Harlow, in an honest desire to give maximum service for the price, spent the first two days of the tournament calling on the sport writers in the press building, with a blue-print of Mr. Hagen's novel underthings, as I believe he called them.

Have You Seen Walter's New Underwear.

"Have you seen Walter's remarkable new underwear?" he would inquire, casually, and although there were

Violets Beat G. U. Nine in 10th, 5-4

Bozek Steals Three Bases to Tie Up Game in 6th.

By JACK ESPEY.

THE Violets of New York University are as tough as cactus, or so it seems to Georgetown's Hilltoppers today. The boys with the delicate nicknames invaded Washington Barracks Diamond yesterday and smashed Georgetown's ten-game winning streak by capturing a 5-4 decision in a hectic battle that extended one extra inning before 1,200 spectators.

The Violets got the better of three Georgetown pitchers, all of whom had enjoyed easy sailing against previous foes, and scored the decisive run after two were out in their half of the tenth inning.

The winning run, carried over by Bohl, who had just made a bad error in Georgetown's ninth inning, came when Hal Poole, second Hilltop relief pitcher, uncorked a wild pitch.

With the score tied at 4-4 and "Packy" White in the box in place of Bill Lomax for Georgetown, New York U. saw its first two batters go out rapidly in the tenth inning. Then White lost control. He tossed four wide balls to Bohl, the fourth eluding the catcher, and Bohl reached second base. The Violet right fielder stole third as White passed Sweeney.

Bohl Scampers Home.

White tossed one ball to Hoffman, N. Y. U. third baseman, before Poole came in. Poole's first pitch was a wild one that rolled to the backstop and Bohl scampered home with what proved to be the decisive run.

Beryl Follet, stocky N. Y. U. pitcher who relieved Bill Clyde in the sixth inning, snuffed out a mild Georgetown rally in the last of the tenth when he picked Mooney off first for the third out. Mooney had reached first on Capt. Mayell's error after two were down.

Georgetown's winning streak was in danger from the second inning on. In the second the Violets pushed over two runs. Georgetown tied matters in its half of the frame.

N. Y. U. took a one-run lead in the fourth when Bohl singled, Sweeney doubled and Hoffman singled, scoring Bohl. Only some fine fielding by Capt. Ralph McCarthy, who cut off two prospective runs at the plate with rifle throws from the outfield, kept the visitors from drawing further away.

Bozek Steals From First to Home.

The score was tied again in the sixth when Johnny Bozek, Georgetown right fielder, stole second, third and home.

N. Y. U. made it 4-3 in its half of the ninth. Mayell singled with two down to count Hoffman, who had opened the inning with a single.

Bohl's aforementioned error enabled Georgetown to register its fourth run in the last of the ninth. On McCarthy's single, Bohl let the ball go through him, and Morris, who was on first, scored.

One of the most unusual plays known in baseball marked the fourth inning attack of N. Y. U. The bases were loaded when Clyde hit what appeared to be a looping single to center, but McCarthy, racing in from the outfield in an effort to catch the ball in the air, snared it on the first bounce and forced Sweeney at the plate with a quick peg to Tierney. Sweeney had remained close to third base, fearing McCarthy would catch the ball in the air. The play robbed Clyde of a hit.

LYONS STARS IN CHISOX VICTORY

Browns Beaten, 3-2, in 10th; Crowder Loses Duel.

CHICAGO, April 21 (A.P.).—Teddy Lyons pitched a beautiful game against the St. Louis Browns here today, giving out five hits in 10 innings and started the White Sox rally with a triple against the right field wall in the tenth that was responsible for his 3 to 2 victory. Ernie Smith poked a single to right to drive in the winning tally.

It was a tough game for Alvin Crowder to lose, for he was very effective, letting out a scant seven hits and holding the Hose hitless until the sixth.

William Kamm's home run into the left field stands was the feature clout of the game. Jim Moore was on the paths at the time.

Robins Stop Braves; Bissonette Game's Star

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 21 (A.P.).—Adolfo Luque, starting his seventeenth major league campaign, pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to their first victory of the season today, defeating the Boston Braves 15 to 8.

A line drive off Sisler's bat in the ninth crippled the Cuban hurler's pitching hand and forced him to retire, but not before his teammates had piled up a lead that gave him the victory. The Braves started a rally off his successors, Moss and Faulkner, which netted five runs.

Del Bissonette was the big gun of the Dodgers' attack, driving in seven runs with a home run and a triple, both when the bases were loaded.

Japanese Tennis Team Defeats Austria, 6-2

Vienna, April 21 (A.P.).—Japan's formidable tennis team defeated Austria in a three-day international competition decided today, winning a total of six matches to two. The invaders captured two of today's three contests.

Takeichi Harada and Tamio Abe won in doubles from Herbert Kinzel, jr., and Heinrich Effermann, 6—2, 6—3, 8—6, without having to extend themselves.

In the first of the singles Yoshibo Ohta downed Hermann Artean, 6—2, 5—7, 8—6, 7—5, the Japanese player dominating most of the rallies. The other singles contest was begun the first day and finished this afternoon with Frank Matejka scoring for Austria over Harada, 8—6, 8—6, 3—6, 4—6, 7—5.

4 HOME RUNS AID GIANTS TO WIN

Phillies Drop Series Final, 8 to 6; Two for Jackson.

NEW YORK, April 21 (A.P.).—Four home runs, two by Travis Jackson and one each by Fred Leach and Bob O'Farrell, paved the way for the New York Giants' 8-to-6 victory over the Phillies today. The triumph gave the New Yorkers a clean sweep of the series.

Bill Walker, who went the route for the winners, was hit hard in spots but managed to set the heavy slugging Phillies back when hits meant runs. Claude Willoughby, ace of the Phillies hurling squad, started for Philadelphia but was knocked out in the fourth inning when the Giants bunched five hits for two runs. Ray Benge and Ace Elliott followed Willoughby on the mound.

Lengthy Home Stand Opens Today

Johnson Will Send Burke Against Boston Club.

Pennsylvania Clubs in Movement for Sunday Ball.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—The Nationals were scheduled to leave here tonight for home, where they will entertain continuously until May 26, with the exception of a one-day jump back here for a double-header on May 16. During this long home stand every team in the Barnard circuit will show at the Clark Griffith Stadium, with the Red Sox and Mackmen making two visits.

Aside from being at home before their own crowds, the fact that morning practice is possible should have the Nationals at the very peak of their form, and their fate, if any, should largely depend upon how they fare within the next month.

The first of the visitors will be the Red Sox, who open a three-game series tomorrow afternoon. Johnson probably will use Bobby Burke in the box against the Boston Club.

Later in the week, fans will get their first opportunity of seeing the world's champion Athletics in action, the White Elephants being due to perform in Griffith Stadium Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Philadelphia Agitates Sunday Baseball.

There is a move on foot here to make another fight for Sunday baseball in Pennsylvania, with the two local clubs and the Pittsburgh Pirates particularly interested, although both of the major leagues would be benefited.

Washington figures indirectly in the argument, the Philadelphia clubs pointing out that Sunday ball in the Capital is taken as being approved by President Hoover by the fact that he helps start off each season by tossing out the first ball. While this line of reasoning appears to be a little far fetched, it is being worked overtime by proponents of the proposed referendum.

If the weather continues warm in Washington, "Sad Sam" Jones likely will make his 1930 debut in the series with the Red Sox, which starts tomorrow.

Bishop raced to almost deep center in the first inning today to snare Sam Rice's near Texas Leaguer.

Despite the fact tat it was cold and chilly, a crowd of 20,000 was on hand at the start of today's game. The sun came out for a while in the third inning, but it did not seem to make conditions much better.

Three Brilliant Plays In Succession.

Three brilliant plays in rapid succession set down the Mackmen in their third round. First, Judge made a fine leaping catch to snare Haas' liner, then Hadley jumped high to take Cockrane's hard bounder with his gloved hand, and Myer ended the frame by tearing out to short-right to turn in a nice over-the-shoulder grab of Simmons' near-Texas Leaguer.

The Nats' first two hits were extra basers, a double by Judge and another by Hadley. The first of these drove home a run, and Hadley's was later turned into one.

Carlson Holds Reds As Cubs Triumph, 9-1

Cincinnati, April 21 (A.P.).—Hal Carlson toyed with the Reds while Chicago's sluggers drove three home runs over distant Redland Field walls, enabling the Cubs to win today by 9 to 1. Every visitor made at least one hit. English led with three safeties. Homers by Wilson, Hartnett and Beck accounted for six runs.

Borotra Defeated; France's Hopes Fall

Biarritz, France, April 21 (A.P.).—Jean Borotra, French Davis Cup tennis veteran, was beaten in the semi-finals of the Biarritz tournament today by Raoul Rodel, No. 16 in the French ranking, by scores of 3—6, 6—4, 8—6.

With Cochet absolutely out of the French championships May 19, and perhaps absent from Wimbledon, and Lacoste out of tennis altogether, the defeat of the third "musketeer," Borotra, increased the thick gloom which has been settling around French tennis headquarters the last few weeks.

IRVING HADLEY.

Earnshaw Passes 3, Forcing in 2 Runs in the Fourth.

Hadley Settles Down After Poor Start, Yielding 8 Hits.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—The Nats, who fractured Pitcher Tom Zachary's winning streak in Washington yesterday, smashed another one here this afternoon when they gave the world's champion Athletics their first beating of the season. At the finish the scoreboard read: Washington, 6; Philadelphia, 3.

Irving Hadley drew the pitching assignment, and although he was off to a poor start, he was still in there pegging away at the finish, while Connie Mack had called on three flingers—George Earnshaw, Howard Ehmke and Lee Roy Mahaffey, the latter a Portland, Oreg. rookie. Hadley was wild as a March hare at times, but he had plenty of stuff and granted but eight hits, which he kept fairly well scattered.

Nats Make Use Of Hits.

The Nationals also were credited with the same number, but they had the happy faculty of putting all but three to good use, and six of them were for extra bases, the biggest being a homer by Joe Cronin into the left-field stands with Myer on base in the fifth. It was the second circuit clout of the young season for the "San Francisco kid."

Earnshaw was not hit particularly hard, the Nats scoring four runs on the three bingles made off his slants, but all of his four passes were used in run making, three walks in a row in the fourth forcing two runners home and causing his hasty exit.

West and Goslin were the only Nats to go hitless, with Rice showing the way with a double and single. Foxx, with three singles and Haas, with two doubles, the only extra basers credited to the Macks, were high guns for the champions.

In addition to showing plenty of fight and overcoming a two-run lead, the Nats gave a brilliant exhibition of fielding. Judge, Hadley, Myer and Cronin made some nifty stops, while three double plays were made, the

BATTLING ON OUTRUNS MUCKER IN SPRINT AT GRAW

Favorite Runs 2 Lengths Behind

Avalon Wins First at $23.40, Beating Spirit River.

(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 21. The Lansdowne, 6-furlong feature of a program that attracted Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and 20,000 spectators here today, fell to the Glen Riddle Farm's Battling On, who stepped the distance in 1:13 1-5. Coming with a rush in the stretch, Miss Betty Bowman's Era won the final race on the card, defeating the favorite, Cudgeller, by a length.

Slow to get going, the Audacious—No Time 4-year-old gelding closed with lightning speed to gain a well-earned victory, rewarding his followers with a $17.10 win price.

Realtor set the early pace, but Cudgeller assumed command in the stretch and looked like the winner. Cudgeller had trouble getting clear in the early running, and Jockey Quackenbush took his mount outside for the stretch run. After a burst of speed the favorite succumbed to the fast-charging winner.

"Goggles" McCoy, who had the mount, stepped the 3-year-old son of Oceanic—Maid at Arms out of No. 1 position into the lead. Mucker attempted to wrest the lead from Battling On at the half mile pole, but McCoy let out a wrap and soon opened a two-length lead. Saving ground at the turn for home, Battling On continued at his even pace to be home the handiest sort of winner by two lengths over the Dixiana's Mucker, the favorite. Third money went to Miss Blanche Watson's Chattering.

Etonardo, Zahn and Top Kick declined the issue at post time, leaving a field of six to go postward. They were outmatched by Battling On, who was sent postward in rare fettle by Trainer George Conway.

Workman Wins With Malolo in Second.

Today's program, the seventh of the Harford Agricultural Breeders Association's spring season, was held under ideal weather conditions. The track was fast for the first time in several days.

It begins to look as if Raymond Workman, contract rider for H. P. Whitney, will be the leading winning rider here. He registered his eighth score in today's second race astride C. Graffagnini's Malolo, one that he booted to victory last week.

Although an outsider in the wagering, Howard Bruce's Avalon was given a rousing reception when he came back to the scales in the day's 4½-furlong opener.

The colt, who whipped ten other 2-year-olds, enabled Howard Bruce, of Baltimore, popular owner of the famous steeplechaser Billy Barton, to register his first flat victory since he was in for this sort of racing.

Avalon is trained by Elmer Trueman, of Washington, who has been very successful this season, winning a pair of purses with Ral Parr's Her Grace, a candidate for both the Preakness and Derby.

Ross Makes Killing With My Scoop.

Samuel Ross, of Washington, made a killing when My Scoop, paying $48.30, won the fifth, a mile and 70 yards affair.

Away slowly, My Scoop was taken the overland route to be second at the turn for home. He easily put Francis St. L. away to come all alone. Francis St. L. took the place from Flashing.

Sonny Workman registered his ninth score of the meeting when he drove T. A. Farrell's Royal Charge home ahead of Vowed Vengeance and Gunther in the sixth, a mile and one-eighth affair.

Workman now has a commanding lead in the race for the gold stop watch offered to the leading winning rider here.

BLACK FLYER, away fast and saving ground on both turns, drew into a long lead and was never in danger. CAPTAIN'S DAUGHTER suffered slightly from crowding first part of it, but held on well when clear through stretch and outlasted WINGO. Latter was a keen factor for entire trip, held on courageously in the drive, but could not improve position. MISS SUDDUTH faltered slightly after saving much ground first half mile. MINDORA raced in close quarters most of the journey.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BACK LOG, $19.34, $8.15, $3.24; THE WAMPUS, $4.74, $2.32; DEEMSTER, $2.32.

BACK LOG was hustled into a long early lead, saved ground turning into stretch and, responding gamely when challenged through stretch, drew out decisively. THE WAMPUS, always in closest pursuit of the winner, made a determined bid at head of stretch, but raced slightly wide thereafter. DEEMSTER, outrun to the stretch where, taken back when in close quarters, came again when clear and finished strongly. JAY WALKER tired after racing into contention.

THIRD RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:57. Off at 2:58. Winner, Mrs. K. Two-dollar mutuels paid—YOUR PLAY, $4.02, $3.20, $2.88; GOTTA GO NOW, $15.98, $9.08; LEAH JANE, $4.64.

YOUR PLAY, away slowly, moved up strongly on extreme outside on far turn and, racing to GOTTA GO NOW into defeat, was drawing clear at end. Latter held her field safe throughout, saved ground wherever possible and only weakened last sixteenth. LEAH JANE was crowded to outside when racing strongly midway to stretch. ALICE ON had no excuses.

FOURTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. The Misses. For 2-year-olds, fillies. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:20. Off at 3:24. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RARE CHARM, $18.26, $8.58, $4.66; MASTER'S ROSE, $24.28, $10.12; PLUMAGE, $4.06.

RARE CHARM was reserved behind PLUMAGE until well into stretch and, responding courageously on last furlong, wore latter down in mild drive. MASTER'S ROSE closed stoutly on inside, but could not get to leader. PLUMAGE bore out slightly when tiring last eighth and just lasted to outfinish REVERBERATE. Latter went well and was going strongly near the finish. REGAL LADY tired badly through stretch.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; allowances. The Richmond. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:45. Off at 3:48. Winner, R. Eastman's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIKE HALL, $3.02, $2.60, out; LOW GEAR, $3.30, out; FIDDLER, out.

MIKE HALL, away fast and setting a good pace under steadying restraint, shook off FIDDLER, who challenged on far turn and, drawing out, won as rider pleased. LOW GEAR, outrun first half mile, moved up stoutly when reaching the turn and, taken to the inside, outlasted FIDDLER. Latter was away poorly and used up in first part of it; tired badly in drive. ASTABULA retired after reaching stretch.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:09½. Off at 4:09½. Winner, H. C. Hatch's blk. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK CLOUD, $5.36, $3.58, $2.76; SHOW DOWN, $4.58, $4.10; GENERAL JACKSON, $6.50.

BLACK CLOUD followed the pace closely on inside first part of it, gradually disposed of SHOW DOWN on back stretch and, continuing gamely, had something in reserve at end. SHOW DOWN crossed over sharply on his path after reaching first turn, continued well until put to a drive at head of stretch and, although holding on courageously, was not good enough. GENERAL JACKSON worked way up steadily on outside, came with a good burst of speed through stretch, but could not improve his position. ROLLING SEA suffered from crowding on first turn and could never reach a contending position. BURNT BROWN was always outrun. JAMES M. also suffered interference on the first turn and again on the back stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:40. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NANI HAWAII, $8.60, $4.16, $3.42; BLACKBERRY, $5.48, $3.88; MARGATE, $4.86.

NANI HAWAII displayed usual early speed and, saving ground throughout, lasted to hold BLACKBERRY safe in final drive. Latter raced restrainedly until reaching stretch where, taken to outside, closed stoutly and would have won had Riley elected to make his move earlier. MARGATE held on well and only faltered in final sixteenth.

Boots and Saddle's

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

—Havre De Grace Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 21. The Harford Old Maryland Purse, for horses three years old and upward, that were foaled in this State, occupies the place of feature on tomorrow's racing program here.

Nine are entered in the Harford Old Maryland, which will be decided over the mile and 70-yard route and run as the fifth event.

FEATURE RACE—The Seagram Brothers' SWEET SENTIMENT may be the winner, but it is one of the toughest races of the day. SWEET SENTIMENT received a good conditioner here last Monday with Flimsy, Jimmy Moran, Chlo Boy, Betty Beau and a few others. We are allowing that race edged the son of Mackenzie II up for his best effort. Last fall SWEET SENTIMENT was capable of beating better horses than he meets tomorrow.

GUILFORD may be the one to beat. The J. E. Griffith colt showed fine form in his initial start of the year last Thursday when he had Mucker extended to the last ounce to whip him. Back of GUILFORD were the Derby and Preakness candidates, Swinfield and Fortunate Youth. SNELBOC appears to have a slight pull in the weights, considering he is a 4-year-old. SWEET SENTIMENT and GUILFORD are both one year his junior.

The Harford Old Maryland is going to be an interesting race to watch and should no rain fall between now and post time it will be run over a fast track.

FIRST RACE—ABDUCTION was never out of a pull to beat eleven juvenile opponents last Friday. That effort was over a muddy track. If he can run equally as well over a fast strip he is going to be hard to catch in the day's opener. He has an extra advantage by breaking from No. 1 position. MISS CANOPY was in a hot spot her last out at Bowie. She has a chance on New Orleans form. PRINCE APOLLO was no match for Miss Dinwiddie last Thursday, but back of her were thirteen fair juvenile platers. SONNY FRONK is a money possibility in the initial event.

SECOND RACE—A dash for maiden 3-year-old platers is an extremely open race. TORRENTIAL showed a flash of speed in her only outing at this course. She is likely to improve off that effort. WILD FLOWER will be in the same race. He broke slowly and closed a big gap. TORRENTIAL had the most speed, however. DUNRO showed a good quarter with Battling On and Gunman before he stopped last Thursday. He may hang on longer this time. GNOME BOY and BROKER, also eligibles, both may be close up if they start.

THIRD RACE—ST. PRISCA could beat the kind she meets in the third in Miami last winter. She is in the hands of a capable trainer and although she has not started since the Miami season, we have no fear that she is not up to her best effort. GENUINE is a speedy trick, but he has been stopping in his Maryland races. ST. PRISCA will be charging on him through the last quarter mile. EQUATION has about rounded to his best form. He may upset the dope, but we doubt if he is in a class with ST. PRISCA and GENUINE. VIRADO is taken to hold the others safe. MONTFERRAT won his first start of the year last Friday. He may make it two straight, but he's very unsound and unsound horses are not reliable.

FOURTH RACE—ENID and PANDA are hard to separate in the Administration Purse. ENID ran a good race in the James Rowe Memorial Handicap at Bowie and PANDA turned in a clever effort back of Molasses Jane at the course. They both carry the same package in the Admiration. On last year's form we would say ENID was the better filly. RED CROSS SISTER went fairly well behind Irish Polly and Beatty Beau last Friday. However, she would have to show a lot of improvement over that race to beat either Enid or Panda, we believe. FINITA is a maiden. She went well her last out, but she appears to be in a little deep tomorrow.

SIXTH RACE—To us GERARD looks like the most probable winner of the day. His last winning effort here was evidence that he is in best of condition. FRUMPER won his last start at Bowie and he has speed to spare at the end. He didn't beat much. We must give GERARD preference over him. GUIDE RIGHT may outlast AZIZ, provided the latter starts here and not in the fifth number.

SEVENTH RACE—BOUNDING DEEP finished far back in the nightcap last Saturday. He couldn't run a lick in the muddy going that day. It may be worth while to give him another chance, now that the track is fast. He goes in the curtain affair tomorrow. He's a fit horse and when at his best he can beat the kind of platers he meets here. SLICKAWAY raced with better company than he meets here last Thursday. He may prove troublesome. SUNNY SAINT belongs with this class of platers, but he may need a tightener. OLD TIMES is preferred over the others.

AVALON, displaying high speed from the break, went into an early lead, saved ground all the way and drew out easily nearing the finish. SPIRIT RIVER worked his way up on the outside, came with good courage at the end, but could not menace the winner. SALISBURY raced forwardly throughout and continued with good courage for the final drive. WALTER K. was hard urged from the beginning and showed a good effort. STAR POLLY began tiring when the real issue came. ABITIBI was unable to seriously threaten the leaders. MAGOTHY tired.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MALOLO, $5.00, $3.40, $2.90; SUN VIEW, $5.00, $3.90; STUPENDOUS, $5.80.

MALOLO began slower than usual, was forced to take to the outside for racing room, circled his field with a rush and, getting on even terms with SUN VIEW in the final furlong, drew out smartly through the closing stages. SUN VIEW had good speed from the break, set a good pace and held on well when collared. STUPENDOUS, hard ridden throughout, was unable to improve her position and was easily best of the others. DREANA LEE broke slowly, but went into a good position after the break. She was making up ground slowly at the end. HAZEL GUMBERTS was outrun. BATTLER weakened from forcing the pace. FAIR ANITA showed no speed at any stage.

BATTLING ON, quick to settle in his stride, was sent into an easy lead after the first furlong and, racing along thereafter and came away when MUCKER challenged on the last furlong. MUCKER, steadied in pursuit of the leaders, saved ground when entering the home stretch, made a bold effort at the final furlong pole, but was held safe thereafter. CHATTERING, unable to keep in early contention, came to the outside and finished with good energy. SHADY LADY offered good contention for five furlongs and tired. SKID was stoutly ridden, but was outrun.

MASTER STAR rushed to the first turn, assumed command when moving into the back stretch, saved ground all the way and, holding on with rare energy when challenged, won out. BAKED APPLE, latter, tired near to the leaders, responded when called on, but appeared to hang in the last furlong. CALOME, well up from the beginning, made a determined effort at the last turn, but weakened under punishment. NAYLOR, slow to begin, closed some ground the last half mile.

MY SCOOP stumbled when the break came and was outrun for the first half mile, reached his field rapidly thereafter and, withstanding a drive gamely, through the last quarter mile, wore down FRANCES ST. L. and was going away under urging. FRANCES ST. L., forced to withstand early contention from EASTER, disposed of the latter and, weakened inside the final furlong. FLASHING, slower than usual in the early stages, came with good speed in the final drive. JOHN ROBERT passed tiring horses through the closing stages. FAIR FOLLY was used up racing in early contention. EASTER tired badly when the final test came.

ROYAL CHARGE, going in his best form and well handled, was hurried to the first turn to assume command, was rated in front while resisting keen opposition from VOWED VENGEANCE, withstood several challenges and came very steadily the last sixteenth. VOWED VENGEANCE, kept close up, made several bids and continued courageously. GUNTHER, well up, was unable to improve his position when put to a drive. FIRE OPAL, outrun for the first six furlongs, made up some ground at the end.

TECH HIGH NINE IN 7-6 VICTORY OVER GONZAGA

Spigel Snaps Purple's Rally

Tech Captain Fans 2 With 3 On Base in Ninth Frame.

Farrell Handles Ten Chances Well After Three Errors.

By WILLIAM F. DISMER, JR.

GETTING off to an early lead in the first two innings, Tech High School's baseball team gained its first victory of the season and turned back Gonzaga in that school's first game of the year, by the score of 7 to 6, yesterday on the Monument Lot. The game marked the resumption of athletic relations between the two institutions, suspended since a basket ball game in 1927.

Three runs behind, Gonzaga made a valiant effort to tie the score in the final stanza when the first three men succeeded in getting on the bases. With two runs across, Pitcher-Capt. Benny Spigel stopped the rally cold when he crossed the opposition with a "quick" third strike against Buddy Bussink, following it up with another strikeout with Jake Farrell, the victim, and ending the game by making McVean loft to the third baseman.

Although Spigel hurled the last two innings, the credit for the victory goes to Pitcher Tom Pratt, who traveled the first seven frames against Gonzaga, permitting only five hits and four runs in that period. The husky chap was in trouble but once, when Gonzaga bunched three hits to score two runs in the fifth inning.

Errors Handicap Dunn's Hurling.

Only slightly less worthy was the pitching performance of Tommy Dunn, Gonzaga hurler, who went the route against Tech, striking out seven and giving nine hits. Errors in the early innings hampered Dunn's effectiveness, but one hit being made by the Maroon and Gray lads in the scoring of the first three runs. Jake Farrell, at third, three times fumbled the ball in the first two innings, his miscues being directly responsible for two runs. After his poor start, however, Farrell came through with a nice performance for the rest of the game, handling ten chances without a slip after the second inning.

Although outhitting its opponents 9 to 8, Tech did not show the heavy barrage produced by Gonzaga, two Purple batters, Freddy Brew and Pitcher Tom Dunn coming through with lusty triples. Everett Russell, erstwhile court star, performing at first base for Tech, and Thomas, catcher, were the only members of the winning team to gain more than one safe blow, each coming through with two singles.

Special to The Washington Post.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., April 21.—William and Mary extended its winning streak to eight straight games by defeating Princeton in a doubleheader here this afternoon, 4 to 2 and 6 to 2. Wallace, pitching for the Indians in the opener, allowed the Tigers but four scattered hits, while his team mates bunched their five safeties to score four runs.

Engleburt led the stick work in the first game with a home run and a double in three trips to the plate. Scammon also banged out a four-base hit, neither, however, coming with men on base. Scott, in the box for William and Mary in the second game, struck out 11 men in 7 innings, the game being called in the seventh, and gave Princeton but five hits, while his mates were garnering nine safeties. Waud pitched good ball for the Tigers in the first game but Ray and Hendey were not as steady in the second fray.

Both teams played their reserves in the last game, Princeton starting most of its sophomores and William and Mary substituting most if its second string men after the fourth inning.

Gonzales Considering Los Angeles Offer

Chicago, April 21 (A.P.).—Mike Gonzales, Cuban catcher, who insists he is not through with baseball, today was offered a post with the Los Angeles Club of the Pacific Coast League, but deferred decision until he could discuss an offer received from the Minneapolis Club of the American Association.

President William Veeck, of the Cubs, which has the controlling interest in the Los Angeles Club, advanced the offer. Gonzales was released outright by the Cubs last winter.

"I will go to Columbus to confer with Manager Mike Kelly, of Minneapolis, before deciding," said Gonzales. "You know, I'm not in the game exactly for my health. I want to get the best offer possible. The Los Angeles offer is a good one, though."

Manager Kelly and his team are playing in Columbus.

TESTIMONIAL RACKET IS ANCIENT

Golfers Will Mimic Pros Despite Federal Trade Body.

some who exclaimed, "Don't tell me Walter has changed his underwear," still I believe a few alert journalists, with a sense of the unique, dropped in mention of it in their dispatches. Golf is one sport in which the lady journalists and experts have established themselves and, of course, Mr. Harlow had to use the most delicate tact in broaching the subject of Walter's new underwear to them, but he is one manager in the sport business who takes his obligations seriously and he did succeed in conveying the intimation to the ladies, as well.

But, in the end, Mr. Hagen, unable to parade the golf course in his remarkable new underwear, obtained the desired effect by retiring to the locker room to sit in his underwear, meanwhile Mr. Harlow, with pleasant casualness, mingled among the lay golfers belonging to the Winged Foot club, remarking, "By the way, I wish you would look at Walter's underwear. It is something new that he designed himself and he recommends it as a relief for slicing, topping and whiffing as it does not bind across the shoulders at the instant of impact."

Sweaters Out and Sweaters In.

It was Johnnie Farrell who explained the reason why all the better-known professionals wore their sweaters stuffed inside their bloomers in the big tournaments of 1928, but insisted on wearing their sweaters outside in 1929. It developed that in 1928 a manufacturer of belts retained the leading pros as belt mannequins, paying them various prices, according to their rank, on condition that they wear their sweaters inside so as to show the belts. But the next year he refused to renew their contracts, so the sweater-inside-the-bloomers style, a daring departure which the boys defended on the ground of ease and convenience the year before, was abandoned unanimously and simultaneously.

It seems hardly possible that the heartaches of the deluded golfers who try various materials on the recommendation of the professionals only to find their golf growing no better fast, can compare with the pangs of uncomely ladies of all ages who read the testimonials of the actresses, attributing their beauty and their romantic triumphs to various brands of rouge, powder and yeast and even to bunion plasters.

I much doubt that a lady who is unable to command the pure love of a desirable male with one type of make-up can captivate him the next time out by adopting a change of complexion or diet. Nor can I imagine an apathetic male responding to the lure of the bunion plaster, although I have been reading many testimonials for them lately by well-known soubrettes and danseuses.

Pegler's Suspicions Confirmed.

A more vicious deception than any of these was practiced in the case of a celebrated invigorator whose proprietors spent vast sums advertising that Jess Willard owed his success to the systematic use of the same. Daily draughts of this tonic prepared Mr Willard for his conquest over Jack Johnson, developed his biceps, enlivened his footwork and increased his height, so it appeared from the daily copy and there is no way of knowing how many earnest young men flooded their interior with this mysterious compound in the hope that by serious devotion to the treatment they would be made as big and strong and valiant as he, and might thus become heavyweight champion of the world.

Then came the afternoon in Toledo when Jack Dempsey struck him down and made him quit in his corner, followed by the morning of July 5, on which, in papers throughout the land there appeared startling announcements that Dempsey, himself, had been secretly imbibing the same invigorator, but in double doses, and thus had been enabled to overwhelm the conservative Willard, who took only half as much.

Obviously, there were some boys who would now start pouring it on their oatmeal and drinking it from flasks all day. To me, this had the appearance of a sordid money-making scheme and my suspicions were confirmed some years later when I said to Mr. Dempsey: "Was your success over Willard attributable to some magic invigorator derived from an old secret recipe of the Choctaw Indians, including sassafras, buchuroot and the bark of the slippery elm?"

"No," Mr. Dempsey said. "It was that first sock under the heart that did it."

Georgia Lacrossemen Defeat Virginia, 5-3

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 21.—In a stirring and hotly contested game, the last half of which was played in a drenching rain, the University of Georgia Lacrosse Team defeated the Virginia Twelve here this afternoon, 5-3. The Bulldogs presented a strong defense throughout the first period, the Cavaliers being unable to register a single goal. Georgia's first point was made by Vielbig, Virginia's third attack, who, in a scramble in front of the net, accidentally booted the ball past Gildea in the first 20 seconds of play.

In the second half, Coach Welch's athletes showed a complete reversal of form and blanked the Georgians. Early in this period, Harrison, Virginia outhome, crashed through with three goals. As the downpour increased, play become very erratic and neither goal was often threatened. All of Georgia's goals save the one by Vielbig were made by Johnson and Abercrombie, the latter substituting for Johnson.

SARAZEN II GALLOPS AT JAMAICA

Wins Opening Handicap by 5 Lengths; Start Mars Race.

JAMAICA RACE TRACK, N. Y., April 21 (A.P.).—Before a crowd estimated at 12,000, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt's Sarazen II, who is an eligible for both the $50,000 Preakness and the Kentucky Derby, made his 1930 debut and made good in convincing style in winning the Apumonok Handicap, the featured event today.

Driving hard five lengths back came R. Spreckel's Judge Schilling, with the Wheatley Stable's Distraction third. Eddie Ahearn was fourth. The race was marred by a very bad start, in which the well-played favorites were away so poorly that they had no chance to win.

High Strung, Sweep Out, Polydor and Tripping Toe were away in the ruck, but Polydor made the best showing of the lot that were left. There was a twelve-minute delay at the barrier. When the start came, Eddie Ahearn, Judge Schilling, Crack Brigade and Sarazen II were away fast. They ran well bunched for the first half mile, with Eddie Ahearn leading. Around the turn into the stretch he lost the lead, but saved ground and again assumed the lead in the stretch.

However, Sarazen II, with his wonderful burst of speed, ran into the lead and, drawing away in the last sixteenth, won by five lengths. Judge Schilling held on gamely to save the place by a head from the fast closing Distraction. The race was worth $6,700, and the time was 1:13.

The Baltimore pinmen, Lang, Askew and Blakeney, defeated Campbell, Bernie Frye and Jack Wolstenholme in the opening round of singles and doubles competition last week.

Augusta Track Team Wins Over Fishburne

Special to The Washington Post.

Waynesboro, Va., April 21.—In a downpour of rain here this afternoon, Augusta Military Academy had little difficulty in defeating Fishburn Military School in a dual track meet by the score of 88 to 29. A. M. A. took first place in every event except the javelin throw. Wesiker and Goodwin scored eighteen and sixteen points, respectively, for the victors.

North Carolina Beats V. P. I. on Track, 88-38

Special to The Washington Post.

Blacksburg, Va., April 21.—University of North Carolina runners continued their victorious sweep across Dixie tracks with an impressive 88 to 38 triumph over Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Miles Stadium here today.

Running on a wet track in intermittent showers, the Carolinans copped every running event except the 2-mile and took every field event except the shot put.

Carolina made a clean sweep in both hurdle events and took first and second places in the mile, 220, quarter and half mile. Swart and Zirkle, V. P. I., took the shot put with ease, and Palmer, Poly 2-miler, made a brilliant spurt to win this event by a wide margin. Arnold, of Carolina, tied the stadium pole vault record at 12 feet, and Bagby, Carolina, set a new stadium record of 5 feet 11¼ inches in the high jump.

Charlie Farmer, Carolina's sensational sprinter, took both dashes with ease. Gene Rule, V. P. I's captain of baseball, donned running togs for the first time today and copped second place in the century dash.

ARMY TEAMS FEARED BY MARYLAND

Coaches Give Squads Work to Prepare for Invaders.

THERE was no Easter holiday, except for Sunday, for the University of Maryland lacross squad that will meet its first big test of the season in the clash with Army at College Park Saturday.

Coach Burton Shipley of the ball team, which will play the Army Nine in the inaugural of Saturday's attractive double bill with the West Pointers, was allowed to take Monday off, but it was different with Jack Faber's stickwielders.

"Blue Monday," in fact, was one of the busiest days the Old Line stickmen have spent in practice this season, as a lot of faults cropped out in last Saturday's game with Georgia that might easily have been fatal in a contest with a twelve of Army's caliber.

Faber Alters Stick Squad.

Faber had to make some changes in his attack to get it functioning against the Bulldogs from Athens and he also had to make one shift in his defense to eliminate a defect that was breaking up the team play. That was after the first half that ended, 3 to 1, and then the Old Liners ran riot in scoring. Now Faber will have to find out whether or not the changes should be made permanent.

Shipley will be well fixed for pitchers to face the West Point Nine, although he has a game with Washington and Lee on Saturday. Milburn and Batson, his two winning pitchers, are ready, as are Phipps, Hauver and Hess. It is likely that Milburn will be sent against the Generals, and Batson, who has won all his three games, saved for use against the Cadets.

Boston College Nine Defeats Marines, 6-2

Special to The Washington Post.

Quantico, Va., April 21.—Boston College defeated the All-Marine Baseball Team here today, 6 to 2. Due to errors by the Marine inner defense on hard chances in the first inning the Maroon team scored four runs, which was their margin at the end of the contest. Although it was

STOCK PRICE INDEX SLUMPS 3.7 POINTS

Copper Shares Sag to New Lows for Year; Rail Group Declines.

FOX FILM TOUCHES PEAK

New York, April 21 (A.P.).—The stock market experienced the sharpest setback since December today, as measured by the price index of 90 leading stocks, which recorded a loss of 3.7 points. The majority of the more active issues lost 2 to 11 points. Trading was fairly active, the day's turnover running close to 4,500,000 shares.

Bullish operators, concentrated in a few amusement, food and specialty shares, lifted about a dozen issues to 7 points to new highes for the year, but these gains were mostly curtailed or lost before the close.

The movement appeared to be largely in the nature of a technical reaction such as has been forecast in conseravtive quarters for some time, on the theory that the rapid upturn during March and the first half of April had been more pronounced than justified by the recovery in business and trade. The market was weak at the close, shorts finding no cause to cover.

U. S. Steel Drops 4 Points.

A disturbing development in the afternoon trading was a drop of about 4 points in U. S. Steel, despite the statement of Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee, at the annual meeting, that the future may now be faced "with a feeling of assurance, confidence and safety." Mr. Taylor's statement that the corporation's capitalization has now been "firmly fixed" was interpreted in some circles as dashing cold water on the split-up rumors that have been circulated for some time.

Coppers displayed pronounced weakness, several issues sagging 3 to 7 points to new lows for the year, in reflection of talk of a further reduction in copper prices to 12 cents a pound, after the slash from 18 to 14 last week. Other unsettling factors were a substantial gain in California Crude Oil production last week, and unfavorable first quarter earnings statements from such companies as Atlantic Refining, Hudson Motor, Youngstown Sheet, and du Pont. A few first quarter statements, however, showed moderate gains over the like period of 1929, including those of Colorado Fuel, General American Tank, and General Foods.

Fox Film A was a strong spot, moving up 7 points to a new high for the year at 55⅜, and closing at 53⅜, reflecting announcement of the new financing plan. Loew's and General Theaters were strong for a time, but reacted late in the day. Radio Corporation sold up about 2 points to 64¾, a new high for the year, then slipped back to 63¼. In the generally sagging rails, Norfolk & Western shot up 6½ points. Among the normally fast movers, Vanadium was bid up 10 and J. I. Case 7 to new highs, and these gains were later reduced.

Allied Chemical Loses 11 Points.

Allied Chemical fell about 11 points, and shares losing 4 to 7 included American & Foreign Power, American Telephone, American Tobacco B, Anaconda, Columbia Carbon, Electric Power & Light, General Electric, Goodyear, Graybo, Houston Oil, International Harvester, Union Carbide and Underwood Elliott.

Credit conditions were easy, call money renewing at 4 per cent, and again sagging to 3½. Money was available in the outside market at 3. Foreign exchanges were dull, reflecting the Easter Monday holiday abroad. Sterling Cables ruled at $4.86 1/16, off 1-16.

Commodity markets were also under pressure. Wheat futures lost from ⅜ to ⅞ of a cent, reflecting weak Winnipeg and Buenos Aires markets and bearish weather. Corn lost more than 2¾ cents, reflecting an increase in the visible supply. Cotton futures lost 75 cents to $1.15 a bale.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, April 21 (A.P.).—Acute weakness in corn values today caused the market to break 3c a bushel in some cases. Hurried selling to stop losses developed, the trade being taken by surprise as a result of the corn visible supply showing an increase notwithstanding liberal shipments from Chicago, accompanying opening of lake navigation. Rapid progress of spring wheat seeding, together with talk of discontinuance of Federal Farm Board loans to wheat growers, had a bearish effect on wheat.

Closing quotations on corn were nervous 2¾-2¾c lower than Saturday's finish. Wheat closed unsettled at ⅛c net decline, oats ⅛-¼c down, and provisions unchanged to 7c off.

Most of the instability of the corn market developed near the close and after announcement of 261,000 bushels increase of the corn visible supply during the last week despite shrinkage of stocks at Chicago. The country's total stock of corn in sight is now 23,641,000 bushels, against 30,853,000 bushels a year ago. Prospects that corn planting would soon be well under way throughout the corn belt also tended to pull corn prices down.

Wheat was affected by the late weakness of corn, whereas earlier corn was sensitive to downturns of wheat. A bearish factor as to wheat was liquidation of May holdings, as a result of signs that Federal loans on wheat were about to be discontinued. It was not until after today's trading was at an end, however, that definite announcement was made saying loans of Federal money on wheat at the present basis would cease, at least temporarily, after April 30.

Beneficial rains over sections of the Southwest and West, together with statements that the United States wheat visible supply on May 1 would total about 138,000,000 bushels against a ten-year average of only 47,000,000 bushels did much to make wheat prices average lower. With most European markets closed on account of a post-Easter holiday, overseas demand for wheat from North America was poor. Oats were easier, sympathizing with corn and wheat.

Provisions reflected downturns, both in hog values and in corn.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May, 1.02¾-103, 1.06¼-⅜; July, 1.04⅝, 1.08-⅛; September, 1.07⅜-⅝, 1.11⅛-¼; December, 1.12, 1.15⅝. Corn—May 79⅞, 81⅞; July, 81⅛; September, 82⅜, 84¼-⅜; December (offers), 79.

TELEPHONE BONDS DECLINE 7 POINTS

Stock Conversion Shares and Rails Slump in Dull Turnovers.

AMUSEMENT LIST GAINS

New York, April 21 (A.P.).—The bond market was both dull and easy today. Although the largest declines appeared in issues carrying stock conversion or warrant features, many of the investment rails failed to resist moderate pressure and losses of a point in this group were rather numerous. United States Governments, after an irregular forenoon, stiffened in the later trading and closed slightly higher, reflecting a relaxation in demand loan rates. Time money was firm.

Canadian Pacific 4s, Santa Fe 4½s of 1948, Chicago & Northwestern 4¾s, Morris & Essex 4½s, Nickel Plate 4½s, Southern Pacific collateral 4s, New York Central 4½s and Union Pacific first 4s were among the high-grade carrier liens showing losses ranging from 1 to 2 points. Declines in this group were fairly general, although the secondary rails were somewhat firmer.

With the exception of a few amusement company bonds, the share feature group was heavy. American Telephone 4½s led the decline with a 7-point net loss. International Telephone 4½s, Missouri Pacific 5½s, New Haven 6s and Southern Pacific 4½, with warrants, sagged from 1 to 2 points.

General Theaters 6s were the strongest of the amusement bonds, rising a maximum of 6 points. Pathe 7s rose 2; Warner Brothers Pictures gained ¾ net and Loew's 6s rallied about 2, but turned at the close.

Utilities and industrials were quiet and irregularly lower, with small fluctuations either way. Foreign bonds were very uneven and took a downward trend.

A substantial volume of new financing is hanging over the market. Among the forthcoming issues is the $30,000,000 block of General Theaters 6s to be offered tomorrow, another prospective flotation is the San Paulo Coffee loan, of which New York bankers expect to get about $35,000,000, the total being $100,000,000. These bonds are to be of ten-year maturity and will probably carry 7 per cent coupons. European markets will get a substantial part of the loan, London taking about $40,000,000.

Financing for the Fox Film Co. will involve the issuance of $55,000,000 in 6 per cent one-year notes. Still another bond to be offered soon is a Niagara Shares Co. 20-year convertible 5½s. The aggregate of this issue is reported as $15,000,000.

BANKERS CONSIDER 2 O'CLOCK CLOSING

Group Is Appointed to Study Idea and Offer Plans to Association.

BELIEVE MOVE FAVORED

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

A committee, whose membership was not divulged, was appointed at a meeting of the District of Columbia Bankers Association yesterday to prepare tentative plans for earlier closing of the city's banks for daily public business. These plans, expected to be complete within three or four days, will be submitted to member banks and, in case of unanimous approval, a change in closing hours may be expected.

Although it was explained no definite hour or season for earlier closing had been selected as yet, it is understood that 2 o'clock in the afternoon is the hour contemplated and that the plan, if approved, may first be applied to the summer months. As the business hours of some of the outlying banks differ from those in the downtown section, allowances will have to be made for these in the general plan.

Most local banks now close for public business at 3 o'clock in the afternoon except Saturdays, and then, at noon. On Federal paydays they remain open until 5 and 5:30 o'clock and one suggestion advanced for caring for these paydays' business, in case earlier closing becomes effective, is the reopening of banks at 4 or 4:30 o'clock.

This is the first resubmission of the question to member banks of the association in nearly three years, the original referendum on the matter having failed to reveal unanimous approval, although it did show nearly all the institutions favored the idea. Advocates of earlier closing reminded the conference that 2 o'clock in the afternoon closing is now in effect in approximately 90 per cent of the banks in cities of the Eastern United States.

Plan Successful Elsewhere.

The plan has proved successful in other cities and numerous local bankers are anxious to give it a trial, agreeing that if it is universally adopted, no bank will have any advantage over another and no business will be forfeited by the institutions as a group.

Standing committeemen and section members made their semifinal reports preceding the annual convention at Grove Park Inn, Asheville, N. C., in June, and resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Francis W. Stone, vice president, National Savings & Trust Co., were passed by the assemblage.

Col. Lee H. Landis, general manager of the Chesapeake Beach Railway Co., announces that in preparation for the increased summer business the company has bought two locomotives and five day coaches, which will be put into service shortly. One locomotive has been delivered, and the five coaches are expected to reach the Chesapeake Beach Railway tracks today, coming via the Baltimore & Ohio from Chicago.

Freight earnings of the Chesapeake Beach Railway for March show an increase of 351 per cent as compared with the record for the same month last year, and for the calendar year 1929 there was an increase of 15 per cent over the traffic for the preceding year.

Net Earnings Reported.

In 1929, for the first time in 20 years, the property showed a net earning, and the rapid recent increases indicate that a considerably better showing may be made for 1930.

A syndicate headed by Merrill, Lynch & Co., Kelley, Converce & Co. Inc., and E. A. Pierce & Co., will offer shortly a new issue of $2,000,000 Lane Bryant, Inc., ten year 6 per cent sinking fund gold debentures, with common stock purchase warrants.

Treasurer Charles E. Howe, of the American Security & Trust Co., has returned from a visit at Mifflintown, Pa.

Thomas J. Mangan, jr., manager of the Washington office of Hemphill, Noyes & Co., has joined his family at the Greenbrier, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for a spring vacation.

Curb Review

New York, April 21 (A.P.).—The curb market bounded upward at the opening today as large blocks of some of the leading public utilities changed hands at higher prices, but the rally was checked in the last hour by heavy selling in sympathy with the weakness shown on the "big board." Final quotations were irregular, with a number of rather sizeable gains and a few rather sharp declines trading was moderately heavy in volume, the day's sales running close to 1,400,000 shares.

Electric Bond & Share opened at 117⅞, a new 1930 top, but slipped back to 113⅞ for a net loss of 2⅝. Niagara Hudson, which was turned over in large volume in anticipation of its early transfer to the Stock Exchange, closed slightly higher at 23 after setting a new high at 23⅛. Brazilian Light & Traction attained a new peak at 54⅜ and then dipped to 53 for a small fractional loss. American & Foreign Power warrants broke 6 points and the American Light & Traction issues, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Cleveland Traction and the United Light & Power issues showed net declines of 2 to nearly 4 points. North American Light & Power touched a new high at 74, up 2¾, closing at the top.

Oils turned heavy on the announcement of a large increase in California production last week, and the publication of a relatively poor first quarter report by the Atlantic Refining Co. Cosden sold down more than 4 points and Humble, Vacuum, Texon and a few others sagged a point or two. Cities Service rallied on the publication of a record-breaking 1929 report, but lost its gain on realizing.

Investment trust shares were mixed. Goldman Sachs ran up more than 2 points but lost about half its gain. Mayflower Associates closed nearly 3 points higher and moderate gains were made by New York Investors and American Cities A. United Founders was heavy.

Lane Bryant preferred jumped 16½ points in odd lot transactions. American Hard Rubber, Blaw Knox, Cooper Bessemer, Laclede Steel, Pacific Coast Biscuit issues and a few other specialties sold at new highs for the year. Newmont Mining broke 5 points in sympathy with the weakness of the coppers. Deere & Co. (new) also fell 5 points on realizing.

EDITORS' ATTORNEYS ASSAIL INDICTMENTS

Montgomery Men Attack Method of Presenting Evidence to Jury.

FACE LIBELOUS CHARGE

Alleging improper presentation to the Montgomery County grand jury of evidence which resulted in the indictment of four editors of the Montgomery Independent, Rockville weekly newspaper, for criminal libel, pleas in abatement were filed yesterday by attorneys for two of the editors, Walter S. Casey and Harrison B. French. The other two editors have not yet been served with bench warrants.

Casey is the present editor of the paper and French, Walter W. Liggett and Morris A. Beale are former editors. All are alleged to have been responsible for alleged libelous articles attacking the county officials and Maj. E. Brooke Lee, county Democratic leader.

Two of the three indictments which were returned against Casey are attacked and a joint indictment against French and Liggett. Thirteen pleas are made in each of the attacks, alleging that the members of the board of county commissioners were present in the grand jury room in a body that Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, counsel to the county commissioners, read what purported to be the law defining libel to the members of the grand jury while not a qualified official, not being State's attorney, not his assistant, nor attorney general of Maryland or his deputy, not a judge and not entitled by law to so advise the grand jury; that Maj. Lee read to the grand jury a statement which advised the grand jury contrary to law and that he did read to the grand jury a "written brief of about 50 pages in length of the law governing the matters upon which this indictment was returned against this defendant, as laid down by the court of appeals of Maryland, various State courts, and many legal text writers; the laws of the State of Maryland and the practice of this court; whereby this defendant was prejudiced in his rights."

The pleas hold that these constitute sufficient evidence to have the indictments set aside as having been returned after the grand jury was unduly influenced by the members of the county commissioners and Maj. Lee.

Attorneys P. Barnard Welsh, Edward Peter, E. Barrett Prettyman, Miss Vivian V. Simpson and John E. Oxley appear for the defendants.

Defense counsel declared yesterday that one indictment had not been attacked but would be permitted to go to trial in order that the charges could be thrashed out in open court. This indictment charges that Casey published a libel on the persons of Maj. Lee and the county commissioners in the publication of pictures alleging to show unimproved roads in Spring Lake Park near Halpine.

Judge Robert B. Peter said yesterday that he will not set a date for the hearings on the pleas until he had discussed them with his associates, Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge John S. Newman, both of Frederick, and that should the court refuse to quash the indictments the date of the trials will be subject to the ability of the other two judges to attend, as the defendants have intimated that the defense wishes a full bench.

Members of the board of county commissioners are Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, president; Lacy Shaw, vice president; Clagett C. Hilton, Robert L. Hickerson and Downey M. Williams. The pleas charge that the other four heard each of the commissioners testify before the grand jury as well as Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, counsel to the county commissioners.

Approximately 100 persons from Montgomery and Frederick Counties are expected to appear before the Senate committee on agriculture and forestry this morning at 10:30 o'clock in Room 324 of the Senate Office Building to support the resolution presented by Senator Goldsborough (Republican), of Maryland, giving the Secretary of Agriculture authority to make a survey of the cost of improving the present highway from Washington via Rockville and Gaithersburg to Gettysburg.

It is proposed to widen the road to 100 feet and otherwise improve it and to designate the highway as the Abraham Lincoln Memorial highway. The citizens are representing the various civic and business organizations of the towns along the route.

Judge Willie T. Wheeler, former judge of the County Orphan's Court and known as the "Daddy of the Democratic Organization" in Montgomery County, is seriously ill at his home in Fairland. The judge was taken ill Friday and removed to his home. Physicians at first announced that his condition was critical, but yesterday announced that his condition was slightly improved.

Judge Wheeler is at present superintendent of the Silver Spring County Building. He has been a supporter of the Lee organization since Senator Blair Lee first ran for the Senate in the early 1900's and for many years he has been a Democratic leader of the Colesville district. In the many years of his work in politics, he has trained many young men for their political careers. One of his outstanding proteges is County Commissioner Lacy Shaw, in charge of the Silver Spring district.

The Rector's Aid of the Silver Spring Mission will hold a card party in the old armory tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Work of the construction company in erecting the signal light at the tended, Georgia avenue and the Colesintersection of Sixteenth street exville pike at Silver Spring is progressing rapidly and it is expected that the new light will be turned on for traffic control within a few days.

POPE OPENS SCHOOL FOR VATICAN CITIZEN

Children Taught Secular Lessons but Sectarian Tenets Are Stressed.

OUTSIDE OF TERRITORY

Special to The Washington Post.

Vatican City State, April 21.—Once more the narrowness of the papal state is brought home to its citizens. The papal schools, for the exclusive use of children living within its bounds, are just opened for the scholars. But they are outside the territory, being a quarter of a mile away from St. Peter's Square. With the best will in the world, the Pope found it impossible to find room for schools. Every available yard of land here is built on, or planned out for new buildings made necessary by the creation of the state as an independent realm.

Only papal citizens may send their children to the schools, which are at the end of the Borgo, near the Tiber. Here they will follow the courses as prescribed by the Italian state for elementary and secondary schools, so that the children will not be handicapped if they later on have to earn their living outside papal territory. But on the other hand, a much more extensive and intensive religious program is to be carried out.

Discipline will be strict and, in accordance with the pontiff's wishes, parents will be exhorted to exercise their authority over their offspring, insisting upon respect and obedience. They will be held responsible for their boys' and girls' behavior out of school hours. The teachers will watch over pupils' reading in leisure time and will report to parents when they find undesirable books are in their hands. The Pope intends to rear young people up within his state according to those principles of education which he has recently set down in an encyclical and stressed when addressing the Lenten preachers of Rome.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

EGG-ROLLING on the White House lawn being what it is, Luella thought she should join the babies. Not permitted within the gates unless she had a child with her, she borrowed one—a little 6-year-old boy, who caused all the trouble.

It seems that shortly after they went inside the gates Luella and her ward got separated. She looked all over the place for him and then began shouting, "Tommy, Tommy, here Tommy," like some one calling a cat or something.

No response from Tommy, lost in that terrible mob. Luella called me on the phone:

"Whattum I gonna do?" she asked, in desperation.

"Borrow another boy," I advised, "and stay at the egg-rolling."

* * * *

"DON'T be silly," she said, "I've lost one boy already. What do I want with another one?"

"To help you find the first boy," I suggested.

"How do you find lost boys?" she gasped.

"Put an ad in the paper——"

I could hear Luella stomping her foot, almost knocking the floor out of the booth.

"You'd better come over here and help me find this boy," she pleaded, "or his mother'll sue you——"

"What'll she sue me for? What've I got to do with it?"

"You, you, you——." She was exasperated.

"Go ahead and stutter," I told her. "I didn't lose the boy. Besides——"

* * * *

LUELLA was desperate.

"Won't you please meet me at the White House gate and——?"

So I had to break up a conference, go to the White House gate, plead with the guard, gain admittance and start to look for Luella's lost boy.

"What does he look like?" I asked.

"He had on a cap," she said.

"Yeah? And I suppose he had on pants, too, and a sweater."

"That's right," she said. "He did. How did you know?"

"Well, I was a boy once myself."

* * * *

"SO YOU were," she said. "And did you ever get lost?"

Come to think of it, I had been lost, several times—and I told her so.

"Too bad," she snapped, "you were ever found." Luella was mad, through and through.

"Boys," she snapped. "They're terrible. Why didn't I bring a girl?"

By this time shades of night were falling, the White House grounds rapidly becoming deserted—and Luella's lost boy not in sight.

So, as a final measure, she phoned the boy's mother preparatory to notifying the District Commissioners. The boy was home.

"He wasn't lost, he was just hungry," said Luella, "and he went home to get something to eat."

After all, she should have known that boys will be boys.

REPORT CLASSIFIES FEDERAL POSITIONS

Congress Gets List of All Jobs in U. S. Service Outside Capital.

SALARY CHANGES SEEN

A classification of the jobs in the Federal service outside of Washington is embodied in a report just submitted to Congress by the Personnel Classification Bureau.

Such a classification has been sought by the Federation of Federal Employes for thirteen years. Once it has been put into effect, the present chaos in the field service will disappear.

Under present conditions, with a definite classification lacking, a half-dozen Federal employes are doing the same kind of work, yet drawing different pay. In some instances the pay for similar work varies as much as 100 per cent.

One reason for this is that some heads of departments have been more vigorous than others in obtaining better pay for their employes; another is that some departments have fared better than others at the hands of appropriation committees.

The classification just recommended, which, in effect, is a dictionary of Federal jobs, will affect some 150,000 employes in the field service and extend throughout the country a system that has prevailed here in the National Capital for seven years.

The National Federation of Federal Employes began to agitate for classification in 1917. Congress finally decided to do something, but, awed by the immensity of the task, voted to do it piecemeal, starting with the District of Columbia. An investigation revealed glaring inequalities here, and the result was the classification act of 1923, embodying a definite description of every Federal job in the city, together with a salary scale for such jobs.

The act of 1923 carried a clause providing for a survey of the field service, but this was ignored.

The Federation of Federal Employes continued to fight for the survey, and finally, in 1928, its efforts were rewarded. Chairman Lehlbach, of the House civil service committee, tacked onto the Welch pay raise bill a provision directing that the field survey be made and authorizing $75,000 to finance it.

The survey has been under way since the Welch act became the law, with William H. McReynolds, of the Personnel Classification Board, in charge. Not only has Mr. McReynolds classified the jobs outside of Washington, but he has made a survey to determine how wages and working conditions in private business compare with those in the Federal service.

This latter survey, the results of which were outlined in a report previously submitted, is expected to have a tremendous influence on the future personnel policy of Uncle Sam.

The classification system for the field service, which is embodied in a second report, will be submitted to the heads of all the departments, with instructions that they tentatively allocate their employes to the classes to which they belong. After that is done, Congress will be asked to enact the legislation that is necessary to make the new system the law.

"This classification system," said President Luther Steward, of the Federation of Federal Employes, "will further our movement to put more business in government. After all, that is what the Federal Government is—a big business. Our aim is to see it run as one; to standardize the work, stabilize employment, reduce the turnover, and offer a wage and promotion policy that will encourage the better employes to stay in the service."

The Senate and House conferees on the Dale-Lehlbach retirement bill were still apart yesterday, six weeks after the House passed the measure.

Those close to the situation, however, say that there is no doubt that an agreement will be reached in the end.

A special meeting of the Arlington County Bar Association to honor Judge Walter T. McCarthy in connection with his appointment as judge of the Sixteenth judicial circuit was held yesterday in Clarendon.

Among the speakers who spoke in glowing terms of the appointee were State Senator Frank L. Ball, Capt. Crandal Mackey, Amos C. Crounse, Walter U. Varney, Edgar W. Pumphrey and W. Thomas French. These speakers paid tribute to his qualifications and integrity.

Judge McCarthy, although but 32 years of age, is not the youngest member of the Virginia Bar to receive an appointment as judge of a circuit court.

In 1869 James Keith was elected by the General Assembly of Virginia as judge of the Eleventh judicial circuit, at the age of 30.

He was later appointed to the Supreme Court of Appeals and at once elected its president and was recognized as one of the State's leading jurists.

By unanimous vote a letter was directed to be written to Gov. John Garland Pollard, congratulating him upon his selection of Judge McCarthy. President Amos C. Crounse appointed Capt. Mackey to write the letter to the governor.

Upon a motion offered by Homer Thomas, the president appointed a specific committee consisting of Col. Charles T. Jesse and W. Thomas French to write a letter to the retiring Judge Howard W. Smith, extending the appreciation of the bar for his untiring work during his most successful administration of that office.

Judge Coleman yesterday, upon the recommendation of Sheriff Howard W. Fields, appointed Edward G. Duncan as a special police officer of Arlington County.
